NEWPORT, R. 1., Sept. 20.-Ex-Congressman William L. Scott, one of Pennsylvania's great Democratic leaders, died very suddenly at a late hour last night, at the Cliff Avenue Hotel. He was brought here about two weeks ago, suffering with a severe attack of gastro-intestinal catarrh. He was accompanied by his family and two physicians, the tamily doctor in Erie, Pa., his home, and Dr. William Pepper, of Philadelphia.

Judge Rockefeller made an order recently that in future all applicants for naturalization would be compelled to have a general knowledge of the constitution. A very proper order

She said that Mrs. Miller reached home that afternoon, went upstairs and Judge Rice charged the jury that if was followed by her husband. The two quarreled about something, and Miss Collins heard her sister cry out: "Oh! oh!" Miss Collins, acto the starway and asked:

"What is the matter?" "You keep away or you'll get some, too," said Miller.

Some time afterward Miller came and said :

"I've killed her."

The affidavit goes on to say that then to carry the body out for confailed her. It was dressed and the men started for the havstack, the intention being to let it remain there for a few days. Outside the house, however, it was decided to take the body into the bush lot in a wagon. The throat was cut at the suggestion of Miller's brother, who, according to the affidavit, said it would then look like a "nigger job."
