Duty of Republicans.

While the surface indications are not demonstrative in the camps of the opposing parties in this state, there is a disposition among the considerate voters to vote and act on election day. If all who have the right of franchise would intelligently review the situation, and act accordingly, there would be no danger of bad men being chosen. It is a want of interest that gives the designing an opportunity to ply their vocation, and thus attain their ends. No matter what may come of the Bardsley defalcation it is not intimated that General Gregg or Captain Morrison will in any way be affected. This being the case no Republican has any excuse for refusing them support. They were nominated by a convention representing the party, without any effort to influence their action. With character above reproach, ability to discharge the responsible duties belonging to the positions designated, they ask and rightfully, the united support of the Republican party of the state.

This is the eve of a Presidential struggle, and greater interests would be affected than a defeat of two honorable Republicans. Should this Commonwealth be carried by the Harray combination the Republican party in 1892 would be called upon to use greater effort to secure a victory. The influence on other states would also be injurious. Under such a condition of things every Republican should feel it a duty to cast a ballot for Gregg and Morrison. In such a vote they advance the interests of two men as worthy in every respect as any ever presented by any party.

Let the Republicans of Sullivan county fully appreciate the situation and lose no opportunity to speak for the men and the principles they represent. By such a course a victory will follow.

The Contest in This State.

On Saturday Chairman Kerr, of the Democratic State Committee, indulged in the extravagance of a personal consultation in Philadelphia with a hundred or so Democrats of assorted sizes from different sections of the State. The information about this consultation is that these Democrats, and most other Democrats as well, believe that the Democratic ticket in Pennsylvania will be elected this year.

This is not a pretense with the opposition, it is with them generally a well settled belief. The fact that the Democrats have this feeling of confidence is a very strong and urgent reason why every Republican in the State should do his full duty in the remaining one week of the campaign. There is no danger on account of any Republican opposition to the Republican ticket, for there is none such as disturbed the party last year. The difficulty, if such there is, will be due to a disposition to regard this as an off year in which the result can have no general or party significance. The Democrats have cultivated this idea for the purpose of creating apathy on the part of Republican voters.

This is not an off year in Pennsylvania. The year preceding a Presidential election has never been, and never will be an off year in any State in the Union. The Democratic success of last year could not be repeated this year without dangerously, if not fatally handicapping the National Republican party in its entrance upon the great campaign next year, upon which the control of both the Executive and Legislative departments of the Federal Government will depend. And that control will determine whether the Democratic and British policy of free trade or the Republican and American policy of protection shall maintain.

The contest this year in Pennsylvania, as elsewhere, is one for advantage in the great struggle to come. The Republicans of other States have been thoroughly aroused to this fact, and it is time for a united and enthusiastic movement along the whole Republican line in Pennsylvania. It would be ridiculously weak to accept the claim of the Democrats that no national issue is involved in this contest. A Democratic victory in Pennsylvania would be a Democratic victory with all that such implies. It was claimed that no national issue was involved in last year's contest, but Governor Pattison was no sooner elected than he became a Presidential candidate. His nomination would be assured should the State go Democratic this year.

Pennsylvania could not give a Democratic majority at this time without doing just so much to encourage the free-trade majority in National House of Representatives about to meet. What that Democratic House will do, and what courage will be shown by the lessened Republican majority of the Senate will depend upon the votes of the people this year, and there is no State whose voice will have more significance than that of Pennsylvania. And what would be the effect if all the Republican States which dropped out of the column last year should resume step now excepting Pennsylvania? We should have our free trade adversaries in Kentucky and Arkansas and Texas setting up the claim that the backbone of protection had been broken in the foremost protection State.

There is no issue of personal honesty between the candidates or the parties. In integrity, intelligence, and capacity Gregg and Morrison are equal, if not greatly superior, to their Democratic competitors. The election of the Republican candidates will accomplish every reform that could be secured by the election of the Democratic candidates. There is no danger of the continuation of bad practices in either the State Treasury or the Auditor General's department, no matter who the officials are. The election turns alone upon the issues between the two parties at large, and the result must have the utmost party significance on the eve of a vital Presidential contest.

Are the Protectionists of Pennsylvania prepared to render a verdict that could and would be used to arouse the enthusiasm of the free-trade opposition, and to enable it to enter the Presidential struggle with the prestige of a Democratic victory in this State? That is the question to be answered in November. Can the answer be doubtful?

R. E. WRIGHT AND HIS CORPORATIONS.

Farmers and Workingmen Oppose the Democratic Candidate.

Robert E. Wright the Democratic candidate for Auditor-General, is having a pretty hard road to travel in this campaign. Following up the address to the farmers of Pennsylvania against his candidacy from Leonard Rhone, Master of the State Grange, a Democrat, who was one of Pattison's staunchest supporters last year, Monday came a broadside from the labor interests of the State against Wright. The revelation is made that this Democratic candidate is either president, a director or attorney for at least thirty corporations. The natural prejudice among workingmen against any political candidate actively allied with corporate interests is comparatively insignificant in this canvass when the antagonism to Wright among the farmers is considered.

Many Grangers look upon him as a bitter foe to their personal interests. They think only of his opposition to the Granger's Tax bill before the last Legislature. The farmers have a vivid recollection of Robert E. Wright conspicuously figuring as a corporation attorney, waging a bitter war against their bill last winter.

- Here is a list of corporations with which Candidate Wright is identified, as prepared by some of the labor opponents of his candidacy: Western Union Telegraph Company. Lehigh Valley R. R. Co. Central Railroad of New Jersey. Philadelphia and Reading R. R. Co. Peshon R. R. Co. Catsaqua and Fogelsville R. R. Co. Allentown Terminal R. R. Co. Berks and Lehigh R. R. Co. Iron R. R. Co. Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co. Allentown and Bethlehem Rapid Transit Co. Allentown Passenger Railroad Co. Bethlehem Iron Company. Thomas Iron Company. Crane Iron Company. Catsaqua Manufacturing Company. Allentown Iron Company. Allentown Rolling Mill Company. Allentown Electric Light Company. Lehigh Valley Car Manufacturing Company. Sionton Car Company. Friedensville Zinc Company. Keystone Cement Company. Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company. United Security Life Insurance and Trust Company of Pennsylvania. West End Improvement Company. Elgier Real Estate Association. Lehigh State Company. Mendow Brook Slate Company. Allentown National Bank. Washington Slate Company.

WRIGHT'S CURIOUS DEN.

A well-known Republican and one of Wright's fellow-townsmen, of Allentown, who was in Philadelphia yesterday said: "Rob' Wright, as we familiarly call him up in Lehigh, is looked upon as one of the most successful corporation lawyers in the State. He practically monopolizes the legal business of the corporations in our section. He has his finger in nearly every new corporation pie brought into Lehigh."

"You should see Wright's private office! He seems to take great pride in displaying the names of his numerous clients. It has grown to be a fad with him. I don't know, however, but he does it more than anything else to make his less fortunate members of the bar envious. When they call on him, arranged against the walls of his office, he has row upon row of little boxes on which are labels bearing the names of his clients. There are railroads, canal companies, banks, insurance companies and manufacturing and numerous other corporations in great array. I judge this would be a pretty sight for the corporation hating laboring men and the dissatisfied and disgruntled Democratic farmers who declare they are going to vote for General Gregg for Auditor-General."
