The Democratic Free Trade Platform.

The tariff plank of the Democratic platform means free trade, and nothing less. The convention indignantly repudiated the plank reported by the committee, because it had a few oily phrases in it. The delegates were not disposed to butter the free trade parsnip with soft language this year. This action of the convention was most significant, and it means war to the knife on protected labor and industries.

The Democrats have made free trade their chief and almost their only issue, and on that doctrine they have at last got back to first principles.

For over twenty-five years they have been qualifying their free trade declarations with deceptive tricks and frauds of speech, but they are done with that now. They have caught their true voice and talk plainly now as they did before the war, when one of their leaders in Congress - Garnet of Virginia - announced that Democratic policy aims at duties "imposed with a single eye to revenue only, and not an iota for protection."

industries is alleged to be for "the benefit of the few."

They say: "We denounce Republican protection as a fraud, a robbery of a great majority of the people [?] for benefit of the few. [?] We declare it to be the fundamental principles of the Democratic party that the Federal Government has no constitutional power to impose and collect tariff duties; except for the purposes of revenue only, and we demand that the collection of such taxes shall be limited to the necessities of the Government when honestly and economically administered."

Glorious old Democratic doctrine, this! It means not an iota of tariff duties for protection of labor. It means that the American labor unit and standard must be that of the "half-slave" black toilers of the South.

It means that the natural labor level is that of the voteless Southern blacks, and Congress has no right to put any labor on a higher plane than that.

It means that the Southern Democracy are determined to exploit labor in the future as in the past, not only black, but white as well. They demand theright to exchange the cotton produce of cheap black labor for foreign goods and blacks, load the proceeds home under low revenue duties, and hence to sell at rates Northern white labor cannot stand.

If there is no power in this country to maintain duties for protection, and to keep Northern labor above the "natural level," millions who have known comfort heretofore will know only misery hereafter.

What is the Government good for if it cannot impose duties to protect labor as well as to get revenue?

Prohibition Convention. There will be a convention of Prohibitionists at 1 o'clock, Tuesday, August 2, 1892, at Forksville.

The reason for changing the time from Sept. 2 to August 2, will be made known at the convention.

It is requested that as many Prohibitionists as possible, and that those voting districts not represented May 17 be represented, as important business will be transacted.

I. H. WOODHEAD, Chairman.

Hazleton reports a case of "snaks" in a keg of beer, the occasion being the wedding feast of John Dravoek of Gowen. Dispatches say that things went along smoothly until evening when in the midst of a dance his bride fell to the floor in great agony. A moment or two later six of the guests were writing beside her. A doctor was summoned and he pronounced it a case of blood poisoning. Dravoek swore that John Poffko, his rival, had poisoned the beer and tried to murder him. He was restrained by his friends, and the last keg emptied was examined and found to contain a dead rattlesnake.

What is the sense of constantly giving advice to bathers at the seashore, to boating parties on the rivers and lakes and to tourists in the mountains, when none of them seem to care whether they are committing suicide or not. Three-fourths of the accidents which are reported from such localities are the results of the worst kind of folly. Men who venture beyond their depths in the ocean know that they are taking their lives in their own hands, but they keep at the dangerous business in spite of all that the press is able to say. So boating and fishing parties elsewhere. The experience of others teaches them nothing. For the sake of exciting a little admiration or doing what the ordinary person has to much sense to attempt, they risk life or health and very frequently lose it. It is time we started to reason with them. They won't learn, and that is all there is to it.

Lines addressed to Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Sonnes of Sonestown, Pa., on the death of their daughter, Dora.

I would not say weep not dear friends For tears will e'er flow; When those we love are snatched away, By death's we love resistless call.

They shed lores tokens o'er the grave, They're humane and divine; For Jesus wept o'er one he loved, Then weep but not repine.

You wonder why your lovely daughter, Should fade and die so soon; Methinks to show how sweet a flowers In Eden's bower would thoom.

These little sparkling eyes so bright, That filled your soul with joy; With sweet, clear, brighter shine, Where dwells your angel daughter,

Her tender feet will never tread Earth's rough and thorny way; These little hands you loved to kiss Will beckon you away.

Christian Artruism.

BY REV. C. E. PERKINS.

"Your Father knoweth that ye have need of these things," said Jesus. "Do ye not think he will see you supplied," we may imagine him as continuing, "if you look out each of you for others, as well as for yourself? Why you never can hope for true prosperity upon any other principle. You are all God's children, all brethren. Stand together, and you support each other. Cleave apart and you fall and none care to help you, for whom have you ever helped? The world will treat you as you have treated the world. When you think of these around you, as work from day to day, your labor will help them even as it helps you. You will make a good social life, which shall fill your own life with sunshine. And this is what you ought to be thinking about; lifting up, not yourselves alone, but the entire level of life. There is no security except in a general advance. Society must have a foundation in the general good, and then society will take care of its individual members."

I believe this to be something of the thought which dwelt continually in the mind and moved the ambition of Jesus. And I think it is the truth. As the modern economist would express it, Jesus wished to inculcate the spirit of artruism and to discourage the spirit of egotism - to induce the people to think first of the common life of humanity, then of the individual. Paul, in the spirit of his Master, says to the Philippians, "In lawfulness of mind let each esteem others better than themselves. Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others."
