ASSAILED BY WOLVES.

Adventures of Three Brothers is the Lumber Clearings. From the London Graphic.

Not many years ago the centre of the lumber region every winter saw large camps established. Among the employes at one station was three brothers, as fine specimens of States Government. humanity as could be seen in a day's march. Soon after the snows fell they had a grievance, some difference of opinion, with the boss, or head man, so they resolved to leave and make their way to the nearest settlement, a distance of about three days journey. The snow was not yet in good order for traveling, being exceedingly loose and powdery, the result of the lowness of the thermometer, no thaw having occured since it fell. However, our adventurers were lusty of body and stout of heart; so sunrise one brilliant morning saw them start, carrying but a light "pack," and only armed with their axes.

As they slowly progressed through the pathless forest they became aware that it was becoming sensibly colder, but this was not a matter of great import to them, for there were sheltered nooks to be found and fuel in abundance existed on either side. The pine forests at this season of the year are very silent, for nearly all the birds have emigrated to warmer climates, even the wild quadrupeds seem to be affected by this silence, and, with the exception of the bay lynx and timber wolf, all have lost their voices. On the third day, as the woodmen were passing along the margin of a cedar swamp, they became consious of the vicinity of wolves by hearing occasional yelp.

The animals are so little dreaded by mature human beings in this country that the travelers scarcely paid attention to the circumstance, but when they had gained a well timbered ridge a cry was heard in the distance, as if a pack of fox hounds were in full chase of game. The lumberman at once concluded that the pursuit was after a moose or caribou, and, with natural curiosity, halted with the hope of witness ing part of the hunt. This they did sooner than expected, and in a more dissagreeable way than anticipated, for, coming up the slope which they had already traversed, were distinctly to be seen several large wolves followed by a numerous retinue, and of Mr. A. Dunham, on Wednesday without a doubt they running upon of last week. the men's trail.

No time was to be lost, immediate action had at once to be taken, so the three brothers placed their backs Dunham's on Sunday evening. to a giant tree, and, with their trusty all their lives as dearly as possible. The first onset was lead by four most powerful beasts. Two of the lumbermen, with adroit skill, disposed of their respective foes; not so with the third man. His leading assailant porte, returned home on Monday. fell, but before he could raise his axe he was pulled down by the other Rocks, will open his store about the brute, and but for his prompt pres- 11th. ence of mind he might have been severely torn, if not killed. Finding that his axe could not be further used, the brave fellow dropped it, threw himself on his knees and buried his sheath knife in the ribs of his assailant. This thrust was so immediately successful in its results that in a moment after he had recovered his former weapon and his position against the tree.

In the meantime his brothers had been busy; their coolness and dexterity had done fearful execution, well attested by the dead and maimed brutes that surrounded them. The lesson that had been taught their leaders began to tell upon their followers, for they now hesitated to charge home, but retained a respectful distance, which was soon followed by all retiring into their forest retreats, doubtless consious that lumbermen could not be molested with impunity. The truth of this story cannot be doubted, for the next spring the heads of the slain were presented to the proper authorities, to enable the brothers to claim the royalty upon wolves' skulls.

FOR YOUNG MEN TO CONSIDER

The Most Successful Busines Men of To-day Do not Drink. What led me to make up my mind never to touch liquor was the damage which I saw wrought by it upon some of the finest minds with which it was ever my privilege to come in contact, and I concluded that what has resulted injuriously to others might prove so to me. I have seen even in my few years of professional life, some of the most brilliant literary you would expect. You can buy men dethroned from splendid positions owing to nothing else but their indulgence in wine. I have known men with salaries of thousands of goods for thirty-five years, which dollars per year, occupying positions which hundreds would strive a lifetime to attain, come to beggary from drink. Only recently there applied to me for any position I could offer him one of the most brilliant editoral writers in the newspaper profession -a man who two years ago easily commanded $100 for a single editorial in his special field. That man became so unreliable from drink that editors are now afraid of his article. and he sits in a cellar in one of our cities writing newspaper wrappers for one dollar per 1,000. And that is only one instance of several I could recite here. I do not hold my friend up as a terrible example. He is only one of a type of men who convince me and may convince others that a clear mind and liquor do not go .together

Then, as I looked around and came to know more of people and things, Farm and Heavy Lumber Wagons, I found the always unanswerable argument in favor of a young man's abstinence-i. e., that the most successful men in America to-day are those who never lift a wine glass to their lips. Becoming interested in this fact, I had the curiosity to personally inquirer into it, and of twentyeight of the leading business men in the country whose names I selected at random twenty-two never touched a drop of wine of any sort.

I made up my mind that there was some reason for this. If liquor brought safe pleasures, why did these men abstain from it? If, as some say, it is a stimulant to a busy man why did not these men, directing the largest business intrests in the country, resort to it? And when I saw that these were the men whose opinions in great business matters were accepted by the leading concerns of the world I concluded that their judgment in the use of liquor would satisfy me. If their judgment in business matters could command the respect and attention of the leaders of trade on both sides of the sea, their decision as to the use of liquor was not apt to be wrong. And as opportunities come to ne to go around in homes and at public places I find that I do not occupy a solitary position. The tendency to abstain from liquors is growing more and more among young men of to-day! The brightest young men I knowyoung men who are filling positions of power and promise-never touch a drop of beer, wines or intoxicants of any sort. And the young man who to-day makes up his mind that he will be on the safe side and adhere to strict abstinence will find that he is not alone. He has now the very Trade orders filled by best element in business and social life in the largest cities of our land with him .- E. W. Bok in Ladies Home Journal.
