FEB 28TH 1894 COURT ADJOURNED AT 4 P M TO MEET ON MARCH 12 1894, AT 2 O'CLOCK P M.

Jere. Kelly, HUGHESVILLE, PA.

STEELETON, Pa., March 5, 1894.

The great political battle has been fought and the balance has tipped and knocked the soup-house democracy overboard and they are now trying to catch at straws to keep from drowning, but it is too late they are past recovery. The 190,000 majority for Grow so torments them that their cry is remorse, remorse, remorse, they have sinned away their day of grace, their hope is gone and they are already damned and Cleveland has sneaked into Albemarle Sound to keep out of the way of this heavy commanding in Pennsylvania and is not looking after the killed and wounded under his command.

Col. Wm. W. Jennings who died at Harrisburg last week, had the fortune to render to Pennsylvania at the time of Lee's invasion when the Col. was not yet twenty-five years old, an important service which reflected great credit upon his own courage, intelligence and soldierly skill which should cause him to be long remembered in this Commonwealth and which at the same time furnished Pennsylvania with the most effective reply possible to the cities of other states who declared Pennsylvania was doing nothing to protect herself from the rebel invasion.

In the same way the veteran has been disposed to think lightly of the services of the militia. Col. Jennings's Twenty-sixth Pennsylvania Emergency regiment, however, was not a militia regiment, it was sworn into the United States service for an indefinite period which might prove to be longer than a three years enlistment. A week before the battle of Gettysburg Col. Jennings' regiment was sent to Gettysburg to oppose the advance of Lee's army. Col. Jennings with his regiment was alone skirmishing with and delaying Gen. Early's entire division as Gen. Early has himself declared none but a courageous soldier would have succeeded in doing what Col. Jennings did. None but a skillful, energetic one would have saved his little command from capture by marching fifty-four out of sixty hours. Your correspondent was fortunate enough to be a member of the Twenty-sixth, together with John R. Stevens and George Danly of Eagles Mere, and Jacob Lorah of Sonestown. I write this sketch for the information of the members residing in Sullivan county, for there were a number in the regiment from the western part of the county, for they all loved Col. Jennings and all will mourn on account of his death.

The name of C. E. Jackson appears quite frequently in the Court Proceedings of late. He is a J. P. at Bernice and is quoted a genuine bungler and still he would like to be Prothonotary of Sullivan county. Gosh, what a mess he would make of the records.

Owing to space we are obliged to omit the Eaglesmere school report. Will insert it next week.
