The Republican Majority More Than the Opposition Vote. Phila. Times Nov. 10.

The certain changes in the Congressional table yesterday offset each other, so that the total stands as it did yesterday morning—Repub-licans 251; Democrats, 99; Populists Claims are made that the Populists have carried Texas with several Congressmen, but this is denied by the Democratic State chairman, and it will be safe to accept the denial antil the returns are complete. There may be another Congressman or two to the credit of the Populists in North Carolina when the votes are all canvassed, but returns from that State are slow and uncertain. any rate the Republican majority in the next House is overwhelming.

Past Election Reflections,

Free trade in the United States, wise or otherwise, is not the question for discussion to-day. The wisdom of that principle was thoroughly conconsidered by the press and by speeches for and against, besides a fair speciman of its practical results has been experienced in the past few months. The result of the late election is in the nature of a verdict by the great jury of Americans which has studied the question with more than ordinary energy, and returned its verdict. It shows that free trade a shell have no shiding place on the constant of the late election with more than ordinary energy, and returned its verdict. It shows that free trade a shell have no shiding place on the constant of the late election with more than ordinary energy, and returned its verdict. It shows that free trade a shell have no shiding place on the constant of the late election with more than ordinary energy, and returned its verdict. It shows that free trade a shell have no shiding place on the colley, 103 May term 1893; trespass.

proudly floats.
Several times in the history of the country has free trade been experi-mented and as often came to a dismal determination. The present instance should be a lesson of such force that the Democratic party will conclude to abandon the fallacy and turn its attention to more American and Diarrhoe Rem deas and to the education of states—Hill, Laporte, Pa. men instead of designing politicians.

Never in the history of the nation discovered the trick.

The result of the election proves that the policy of free trade or even tariff reform of the Cleveland-Wilson tariff reform of the Cleveland-Wilson hind is extremely unpopular in the Damocratic party, for it is not due to a large portion of men who have been reared in that party that the decisive blow was dealt with such unusual force. The next House in Congress will have a safe Republican majority which will be an assurance that no further damaging, legislatics that no further damaging, legislatics that no further damaging legislation will be possible. It will stand as the Gibralter of our political enemy against questionable schemes by speculating achemers, and the country can now recover its self and feel secure once more.

Secure once more.
We shall look forward to a healthier feeling in commercial and indus-trial circles and we think we are safer months the sky will again take up volumns of smoke from the factory stacks that have for mouths been silent, as they can now open without fear of the disaster that threatened them, while all the branches of the government were in control of the present administration.

Mever in the history of the nation has a political party received a crushing a defeat or any administration to terible a rebuke.

Mr. Cleveland was implored by prudent men through speeches and the conservative press throughout the country to discourage tariff agitation and above all to desist from his free trade tendencies for the sake of maintaining confidence among business houses and men of the country. He was deaf to all entresties and through his megnetic influence his whole party was fired with the imaginary idea that free trade is what was needed to make this prosperous nation still more prosperous.

If he believes in his own doctrine he must now acknowledge that the people have lost confidence in his judgment. If he forced the dogma on the people as a means of his personal assendency by working on the There is no medicine so often needed in
