Hensel Says Its 4H Right.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 1.—Despite the clerical error in the marriage license bill, by which it is made to read as going into effect October 1, 1893, couples intending to marry will have to procure a license as heretofore. The mistake does not lessen the force of the original act of 1885, for the amendment of 1893 did not annul the act of 1885, it simply supplemented it. Attorner General Hensel when questioned formally on the subject last year, wrote to the clerk of the license coups here bidding him to advise all iaquirers that it was still needful to procure a license in order to secure logal solemnization of marriage.
