The most interesting of these impromptu clubs is the one called in the vernacular "The Kangaroo Court." It is found almost entirely in county jails in which petty offenders and persons awaiting trial are confined. During the day the prisoners are allowed the freedom of a large hall, and at night they lodge in cells, the locks of which are sometimes fastened and sometimes not. The hall contains tables, benches, daily papers, and, in some instances, stoves and kitchen ntensils. The prisoners can and do walk, jump and play various games. After a while these games become tire-After a while these games become tire-some, and "The Kangaroo Court" is formed. It consists of all the prisoners, and the officers are elected by them. The positions they fill are the "judgeship," the "searchership," the "spankership" and general "juryship." To illustrate the duties of these various officials, I shall give a personal experience in a county isil in these various officials, I shall give a personal experience in a county jail in New York State. It was my first encounter with "The Kangaroo Court."

I had been arrested for sleeping in an empty "box-car." The watchman found me and lodged me in the station-house, where I spent a most gloomy night wondering what my punishment would be. Early in the morning I was brought before "the squire." He asked me what my name might be, and I replied that "it might" might be, and I replied that "it might be Billy Rice."

"Looking for work, your Honor."
"Thirty days," he thundered at me, and I was led away to the jail proper.
I had three companions at the time, and after we had passed the sheriff and his clerk, who had noted down all and his clerk, who had noted down all facts, imaginary and otherwise, that we had cared to give him about our family histories, we were ushered pellmell into the large hall. Surrounded in a twinkling by the other prisoners, we were asked to explain our general principles and misdemeanors. This over, and a few salutations exchanged, a tall and lanky rogue cried out in a land voice.

"The Kangru will now kleet." There were about twenty present, and they soon planted themselves about us in a most solemn manner. Some rested on their haunches, other tolunged against the walls, and still others sat quietly on the flag-stones. As soon as entire quiet had been reached, the tall fellow, who, by-theway, was the judge, instructed a half-grown companion, whom he nick. grown companion, whom he nick-named "the searcher," to bring his charges against the new-comers. He approached us solemnly and in a most nventional manner, and said:

"Are ye willin' to be searched?" asked the judge.

"I am, your Honor," I replied.
Then the searcher inspected all my pockets, the lining of my coat, the leather band inside my hat, my shoes and suck and finding nothing in the and socks, and finding nothing in the shape of money, declared that I was guiltless.

A young fellow, a vagrant by profession, was the next case. He pleaded not guilty, and allowed himself to be searched. But unfortunately he had forgotten a solitary cent which was in his vestpocket. It was quickly confiscated, and he was remanded for trial on the charge of contempt of the 'Kangru.' The next victim pleaded guilty to the possession of thirty-six cents, and was relieved of half. The last man, the guiltiest of all, although he pleaded innocence, was found out, and his three dollars were taken away from him instanter; he too, was charged with contempt of court. His case came up soon after the prelimi-naries were over, and he was sentenced by the judge to walk the length of the

The next day I, with the other late arrivals, was initiated as a member of the Kangaroo Court. It was a very simple proceeding. I had to promise that I would always do my share of the necessary cleaning and washing, and also be honest and fair in judging the cases which might come up for trial. Since then I have had opportunities of studing other Kangaroo Courts, but they have all been very much like the one I have just described. HOW TO COOK FISH

For people requiring a diet rich in phosphorus, which is an element of brain and nerve, nothing is more suitable than fish. This is particularly true of the oily varieties, those least fat being richest in nitrogen or fleshforming elements.

Fish, to be wholesome and palatable, should be eaten in scoons and should be perfectly fresh to secure the best flavor.

The fish should be handled as little as possible, and only sufficient water for cleanliness used in washing. Af-ter being cleaned, wipe dry, sprinkle with salt and put in a cool place until with salt and put in a cool place until ready to cook.

To boil fish, put in sufficient boiling salt water to cover, to which add half a teacupful of strong vinegar. A kettle with a flare perforated bottom, on which the fish can be lifted out without breaking, is the best for use, but a plate placed in the bottom of a large, round kettle may be used. It should be taken up as soon as it is done, as it is otherwise spoiled by standing in the water. When the thickest part will readily separate from the bone it is boiled enough.

To have it in perfection a deep frying pan should be placed over the fire and half filled with fat. The fish should be cut in slices of medium thickness, seasoned with salt and pepper, rolled in corn meal and dropped in the boiling grease. When crisp and brown it should be placed in a heated dish and garnished with parsley. Tomato sauce and cucumber catsup may be served with it. If the corn meal is disliked cracker meal or flour may be used in its place, or the slices meal is disliked cracker meal or flour may be used in its place, or the slices of fish may be dipped in a thin egg batter. All fish is improved by serving with sauce. White sauce is used with boiled fish. To make it heat half a pint of rich milk, thicken with a teaspoonful of flour; add two table-spoonfuls of butter, a teaspoonful of minced onion and a few drops of lemon uice: let come to a boil, stir in the juice; let come to a boil, stir in the

Novel Advertising Scheme

A novel advertising Scheme.

A novel scheme of advertising is accomplished by means of the tricycle. A French inventor is using the machine for printing various trade statements on the pavements of Paris. This feat is accomplished by means of immense types set into the tire of the hind wheels of the machine. Ink is used in the printing and the type is made of rubber. Each rubber type is independently inserted in the wheel so that it can be removed and other type inserted. Thus the machine can be made to print any sentence whose length is not longer than the circumference of the wheel.

A reservoir, or fountain of ink is situated back of the seat and flows to rollers, which bear on the top of the wheels. Then as the latter roll around wheels. Then as the latter roll around the ink is conveyed to the pavement and the impression of the letters is left there. While the streets of Paris are traditionally clean, yet there is always enough dust which would be caught up by the ink-faced type, a condition which would result very soon in the clogging of the machine. To prevent this a little blower, or bellows, is placed in front of each wheel. lows, is placed in front of each wheel, and as the machine moves it ejects wind enough to blow away all dust immediately in line with the wheel. EVERY HONORABLE VETERAN DE-SERVES A PENSION, And the Lone Limb is not the Only Reason for a Government Reward Either. (From Journal, Lewiston, Me.) Samuel R. Jordan has just given the Jour-nal an account of his life, which in view of his extremely hard lot for the past few years will be read with interest.

"I am 48 years old and have always lived in New Portland. I enlisted in the army in 1862 as a private in Company A, 28th Me. Volunteers. My army experience injured my health to some extent, although I worked at blacksmithing some part of the time, when suddenly, several years ago, I was prostrated with what able physicians pronounced Lo-comotor Ataxia. At first I could get around somewhat, yet the disease progressed quite rapidly until I had hardly any feeling in my legs and feet, they felt like sticks of wood and I grew so much worse that I could not move for three years without help, as my neighbors and friends could testify. I employed several physicians in my vicinity, and elsewhere, and they all told me that medicines would not help me, that they could do nothing to effect a cure, and that in time I should become entirely helpless. I became discouraged. I was a great care to my wife and friends. Shortly after I met an old army comrade, Mr. All. Parlin, a resident of Madison, Maine, and he incidentally mentioned how he had tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for a severe case of rheumatism and a spinal and malarial trouble, that he had suffered with a severe case of rheumatism and a spinal and malarial trouble, that he had suffered with consequent of his army life, and been greatly benefited by their use. By his earnest recommendation I was induced to try the pills. After taking them for a time I began to feel prickly sensations in my legs and a return of strength so I could move them a little. After a few weeks I began to feel a marked improvement in my condition. I soon was enabled to walk around a little with the help of crutches. After taking for some time I can now walk without crutches, my general health is much improved and I have regained my old-time vigor. I can walk about and enjoy life once more, for which I feel very thankful, and this happy result is due to the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are not a patent medicine in the sense that name implies. They were first compounded as a prescription and used as such in general practice by an eminent physician. So great was their efficacy that it was deemed wise to place them within the reach of all. They are now manufactured by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenetady, N. Y., and are sold in boxes (never in loose form by the dozen or hundred, and the public are cautioned against numerous imitations sold in this shape) at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company.
