Death of Caleb Judson Richar son. Was Assist, Librarian of the Law Institute Since 1867

Mr. Caleb Judson Richardson, the well known assistant librarian of the Chicago Law Institute, died at his home, No. 161 Locust street, at 5:30 o'clock yesterday morning.

The funeral services will be con Dr. G. S. F. Savage at the New England Congregational church, Dearborn avenue at 2 o'clock. The funeral will be private and the interment will take place at Rose Hill. Mr. Richardson was born in Har ford, Susquehanna county, Pennsylvania, July 8, 1827. He attended public school until his fifteenth year when he entered the Hartford Academy, then under the supervision of his uncle, Dr. Lyman Richardson. From the Academy he entered Hamilton College and was graduated with high honors, receiving the degree of B. A. He then entered the law office of Judge William Jessup and commenced the study of law. He came to Chicago Thanksgiving Day, 1860. In 1867 Mr. Richardson came assistant librarian of the Chicago Law Institute and until June 16 of this year had retained the same position. During the late civil war Mr. Richardson was a member of the Christian Commission and spent many months in this work on the field of battle. Mr. Richardson has always been active in church work. Before coming to Chicago he was an elder in the Presbyterian church of Laporte, Sullivan county, Pa. In 1863 he became a member of the Chicago New England Congregational church, and had been a deacon of this house for over ten years. For ten consecutive years Mr. Richardson was also the superintendent of its Sunday school. He had been prominently connected with the Sedgwick street Mission since it had been established by the New England church. A great part of the success of the church and mission work was due to the great efficiency of Mr. Richardson. He was a hard and earnest worker in all that pertained to his church. Of his efforts it may be said: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." Mr. Richardson was married Miss Priscilla Meylert, in Scranton, Pa., August 29, 1871. Two children are the fruit of their marriage, Miss May Meylert Richardson and William Lee Richardson. The mother and children survive him. Two brothers and a sister also survive him. Dr. Wm. Richardson is one of the brothers and a noted physician of Montrose, Pa. For twenty-ave years Mr. Richardson has been in poor health. June 16 of this year he visited his brother Dr. Richardson, with the hope of regaining his health. His Eastern trip did not improve his lung trouble and other complications set in which resulted in his death .- Chicago Inter Ocean.

Those of our older citizens who rere residents of Sullivan county thirty-five or forty years ago will re-call the subject of the obituary given above. Mr. Richardson came to this county in 1854 and became a partner of Hon, A. J. Dietrick in the practice of law. It was during this year that the act providing for a more efficient system of public schools was passed. Mr. Richardson was an free schools which was then receiving strong opposition in sections of the county.

Judge Bedford was at that time filling the newly created office of county superintendent. At the expiration of his term Mr. Richardson was the unanimous choice of the directors of the county for the position which he held from 1857 to 1860. It was on account of this work that many of our older citizens will bring him to mind and will unite in expression of sympathy for the wife and children in the time of their affliction.

The Wyoming colony not only enjoyed great temperal prosperity their spiritual wants were carefully looked after. Public religious worducted by Dr. Simeon Gilbert and ship was regularly maintained morning and evening of each day. The Sabbath was spent in quiet with religious services as the result of peace and good order of the place, it was continually thronged with visitors, and so the great lessons of faith in the prosperity of the Delawares to God were learned by many in their trancient visits. Accessions to the church were constant. The children were carefully taught both secular and religious knowledge, and all looked hopefull that the ideal homes of the Moravean missionaries for the Indians would be practically worked out, other mission points from this centre were being reached and brought under like civilization, but their hopes were not to be then rea-The ruling powers were lized. against them and they awoke to the fact that their possessions were converted by others and sooner or later be taken from them. Before making any considerable expendature they had secured the promise of peaceabl possession of the property from Gov. John Penn and the Indiana that laid claim to their property but in both instances they found that no dependance could be put upon either of the parties. In addition to this the Connecticut Company were mak ing surveys of the land consequently another location must be sought. Rev. Zeisburger in this instance s he had in many other, become their adviser. He had in his labors for a few years spent considerable time preaching to the Delaware Indians in the Allegheny country and they knowing that the Wyalusing colony would be obliged to give up their home, solicited Zeisberger to have them come and make their home with them. This plan after being carefully considered was finally agreed to. A few families had in dvance left Wyalusing and removed to this point. The place selected was the Tuscarawas Valley on the Tionesta creek a tributary of the Allegheny river, During the fall of 1771 Zeisburger gathered a company of friendly Indians at place who assisted him to clear grounds, build huts and make preparations the spring. The work at the same time at their homes, for the journey was daily progressing. The plan arranged for the undertaking was to divide into two parties, one by the overland route to the West Branch through our county, the other by canoes down the river to Northumberland and thence up the West Branch by water as far as the Great Island near Lock Haven. New canoes had to be built and their surplus stock and grain was sold and on the 10th of June 1772. This !

Leaving the West Branch took the mountain path to the Allegheney river and then decending the river by canoes they arrived at their destination on the 5th of August. The Missionary Roth who accompanied this emigra-tion wrote: "Scarce a day passed but what we were able to distribute rations of meat, and never did a soul go to bed hungry.

From this date with the exception of the Moravien villages there seem to have been no perminancy to Indian homes on the Susquehanna The Delawares like the Shawanese Miamas and other Indian nation after the formation of our nationa government, took the Westward march stopping for a time on the Muskingham river in Ohio, when their faithful minister Rev. Zeiseberger died in 1808, afterwards they made their home on the White Water river in Indiana. Thence they crossed the Missisippi and are now established on the Kansas river,

So many kind words have be spoken for the individual member of the Republican county ticket during the past week or two as to cause a steady growth of the feeling that both our nominees for Sheriff and Prothonotary will be elected. If the situation was encouraging at the start it is more than encouraging now, and the friends of the respective candidates can take off their coats and go to work with the assurance that their efforts will not be in vain. Both candidates have friends outside of their own party followers who are anxious for success, and from this it will be apparent to all why there are such strong grounds for basing a prediction of success at the polls in November. The one thing requisite, however, and which should impress itself firmly on every worker, is the necessity for getting out the entire Republican vote to back up the reinforced vote and to make assurance doubly sure. The Republicans in every district should see to it personally that there is no negligence that might result in the loss of a single vote, If this be done and if the Republican strength is polled, the candidates on the Republican county ticket will be returned as elected when the votes are count-
