The following communication from W. L. McLaughlin of Mayfield, Pa., to the Scranton Republican gives another version of the discovery of

Mayfield, Pa., Nov. 30, 1895 .- In reply to the question submitted to your readers last week in regard to the time and circumstances of the discovery of anthracite coal in Pennsylvania, I respectfully submit the sylvania was made in 1790 by Nicholas Allen, a lumberman, who cut timber along the headwaters of the Schuylkill river in the vicinity of Pottsville. Allen lived in the Broad mountain, near New Castle. He led a vagrant sort of life, and in one of his expeditions built a fire one night under the shelter of some trees in a ravine where a coal seam came to the surface. During the night he was awakened by an intense heat around his feet, caused by the burning of the loose coal which had been ignited by the wood fire which he had kindled in the evening. He made an investigation of the place the next day and became thoroughly convinced that he had made an important discovery, but he was unable to convince any of those whose attention he called to it, that the coal was anything more than black stones and after a brief time he gave up in disgust and returned to his home in Massachusetts, where he died.

Morris, who owned a large tract of land in the vicinity of Port Carbon, phia, but being threatened with prosecution for attempting to swindle the Quakers by palming off black stones for fuel, he returned home and sold his land and left the region. Five years prior to time, however, a blacksmith named; Whetstone had and brought her home. We understand it successfully for smithing stand they have procured a warrant for Mr. Warburton for abduction. purposes, but it was not until 1813, covery by Allen that it was introduced in Philadelphia as a fuel of any merit.

The authorities for the foregoing are the late Benjamin Bannen, author of "Coal, Iron and Oil," and P. D. Luther, author of "The Discovery Development and Production of Coal," in the history of Schuykill county.

The New York New York TRIBUNE
Weekly OF NOVEMBER 4TH 1896.

Public interest will steadily increase, and the disappointment of the men whose votes turned the scale at the last election, with the results under the administration they elected, will make the campaign the most intensely exciting in the history of the The New York Weekly Tribune.

the leading Republican family newspaper of the United States, will publish all the political news of the day, interesting to every American citizen regardless of party affiliations. Also general news in attractive form, foreign correspondence covering the news of the world, an agricultural department second to none in the country market reports which are recognized authority, fascinating short stories, complete in every number, the cream of the humorous papers, foreign and domestic, with their best comic pictures, fashion plates and elaborate descriptions of woman's attire, with a varied and attractive department of household interest. The "New York Weekly Tribune" is an ideal family paper, with a circulation larger than that of any other weekly publication in the country issued from the office of a daily. Large changes are being made in its details, tending to give it greater life and variety, and especially more interest to the women and young people of the household.
