FRIDAY, JANUARY 3, 1896

Washington, Dec. 29.—Senator Sherman announced to-day that he agrees with Mr. Cleveland, and as the Senator will to-morrow become chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations his views on the subject are of some importance. The attitude he assumes may surprise some of his colleagues. It will be noticed that he says nothing about the commission created by this statement to-night:-

"I can only express my gratification that the general sentiment now prevailing, both in the United States and Great Britain, is that the controversy between Great Britain and Venezuela ought not to be the occasion of estranged relations, much less of war. I am strongly in favor of the general principle announced in President Monroe that the United States will regard any forcible invasion of the territory of an American State by a European power as an unfriendly act. The boundary question between Venezuela and Great Britain has been the subject of controversy for many years, and is a proper question to be settled by arbitration between those powers. Before the announcement of this doctrine by Mr. Monroe, Great Britain had acquired from Holland a settlement at British Guina. The country between that possession and the settlements in Venezuela was an unoccupied territory of little value except for minerals. The inroads of English settlers upon this region have given rise to disputes between the two Governments, and each at different times has refused to arbitrate the question of boundary.

"I do not feel justified in criticizing the President for his message, as his assertion and definition of the Monroe doctrine is, I believe, a correct one, and whether it is a dogma of international law or of American policy, it has a strong hold upon all of the nations of these continents, and was recognized and regarded by Great Britain before its announcement by President Monroe. All parts of America are now occupied by civilized and Christian nations. the descendants of European ancestors, and they are no longer open to the conquests of European power.

"The refusal of Lord Salisbury to arbitrate this question of boundary naturally created a feeling of resentment, but recent indications that this refusal will not be insisted upon by Great Britain has changed the whole current of public opinion, and now I believe the United States will with the same unanimity expressed by Congress, cheerfully acquiesce in the decision of any fair tribunal that may be agreed upon between the two countries interested. The President in his communication to Congress opens the way to such settlement by declaring that any boundary line fixed by the two contestants will be cheerfully acquiesced in."

The Monroe Doctrine. From Mr. Monroe' message to Congress in December, 1823.

We owe, therefore, it to the candor, and to the amicable relatives existing between the United States and the Allied Powers to declare that we should consider any attempt on

With the existing colonies or dependencies of any European power we have not interfered and shall not interfere, but with the governments who have declared their independence and maintained it, and whose independence we have, on great consideration and just principles, acknowledged, we could not view an tors. interposition for the purpose of oppressing them or controlling in any other manner their destiny (by any European power) in any other light than as a manifestation of an unfriendly disposition toward the Combination of words should be United States.

Meylert who welcomed the teachers to Dushore and spoke of the increase of interest in institute work as compared with the first institute when only about one-third of the teachers were present. The following organiza-tion was then effected: D. C. Roe, Sec'y. and J. H. Thayre, Recording Sec'y. The enrollment showed that 66 teachers were present a very good representation considering the weather. Prof. Cogswell was then Congress. Senator Sherman made introduced and warmly welcomed. He lead in singing "Let's Be Happy While We May," and the patriotic song "America." Prof. George P. Bible, Principal of the East Stroudsburg State Normal school, was then introduced and addressed the teachers on the subject of "Reading." Reading, he said, is the key that unlocks all other sources of knowledge. The reading lesson should be as carefully prepared by teacher and pupil as any other lesson. Expression in reading should be taught largely by imitation, Word mastery on the part or the pupil should be accomplished first.

Advanced reading is giving expression to thought by means of speech and gesture. The thought regulates the expression. Thought is brought out by the intonation of the voice.

Much of the written work should be done with pen and ink. The pen is used much more than the pencil outside of school. Written work should be self-explanatory. Incomplete work should not be allowed. Teachers should make the conditions for doing independent work as favorable as possible. The work assigned should be simple, definite, progressive and interesting. Work should always be inspected by the teacher. Work that is mere copying is of very little value. Supt.
