Philippinas Cloth.

Philippinas Cloth.

The world of fashion is under obligations to these Philippine Islanders for that most beautiful of all textiles, the silky cloth known as pineapple, pinas, or Philippinas cloth. It is made from the soft but strong fine hairs of the pineapple plant, whose collection, treatment and spinning demand a world of labor. It is woven upon hand looms, excepting in one or two of the smaller cities, where European looms are employed. The cloth has all the brilliancy and luster of silk, but is a little stronger and more rigid. It is woven with rather an open thread, so that it affords ventilation to the body of the wearer, and in this manner makes one of the coolest garments for summer wear which is known.

regulation graduation gown just a little refreshing air of originality this season. Perhaps it is the variety in materials used that gives this impression, for the conturieres all seem impressed with the importance of keeping graduation gowns exceedingly simple.

The chief charm of these gowns is the exquisite needlework, that is simply marvelous on close examination.
At one of the shops was shown a large square yoke of tiny tucks and hand embroidery done with sheer mull.
There were yards of hand-embroidered fails to work of a frills to match—all of it the work of a devoted old aunt who had been working on her niece's graduation gown for

Most of the models shown are too fluffy in effect. Organdie was the material most favored, but mousseline de soie, chiffon, veiling, tulle and a num-ber of gauzy materials were in evidence.

Two or three of the gowns were made of silk poplin, and they were fashioned more on the clinging lines than were the others. Simplicity was their most striking characteristics, too; but it was a sort of classic simplicity.

A "Marguerite gown" was exquisitely dainty. It was made of white chiffon over a transparency of white taffeta. The skirt was composed of seven frills of chiffon, briar stitched around the hems with white silk Marguerites were embroidered in an irregular, artistic pattern over the ribbon. The sleeves were slightly draped and were mounted by short, full puffs of the chiffon. The lower edge of the puff was held with a band of the embroidered ribbon. With their soft long sashes and rib-bon bows they certainly boast a juve-nile air that is bewitching, and they adapt themselves to all sorts of figures.

They soften the lines of angular figures and, strange to say, the roundness of the roly-poly girl is lost in this fluffiness of her gown.

Many girl graduates incline toward ruffles, and for these there is the made.

SUNDAY'S DISCOURSE BY THE NOTED

The Choice of a Wife—From a Rustle Bible Scene is Drawn a Practical and Inspiring Lesson For All Classes of People—The Calling For Special Work. TEXT: "Now Moses kept the flock of Jethro, his father-in-law, the priest of Midian."—Exodus iii., 1.

Jethro, his father-in-law, the priest of Midlan."—Exodus iii., 1.

In the southeastern part of Arabia a man is sitting by a well. It is the arid country and water is scarce, so that a well is of great value, and flocks and herds are driven vast distances to have their thirst slacked. Jethro, a Midlanite sheik and priest, was so fortunate as to have seven daughters, and they are practical girls, and conder they come, driving the sheep and cattle and camels of their father to the watering. They lower the buckets and then pull them up, the water plashing on the stones and chilling their feet, and the troughs are filled. Who is that man out there, sitting unconcerned and looking on? Why does he not come and help the women in this hard work of drawing water? But no sooner have the dry lips and panting nostrils of the flocks begun to cool a little in the brimming trough of the well than some rough Bedouin shepherds break in upon the scene, and with clubs and shouts drive back the animals that were drinking and affright these girls until they fly in retreat, and the flocks or these ill-mannered shepherds are driven to the troughs, taking the places of the other flocks.

Zulu Prevents a Disastrous Fire.

The following story can be vouched for, and, in recognition of the timely action of the dog, the Alliance Assurance Company, with whom the premises were insured, have awarded a silver medal to Zulu, fully realizing his sagacity in preventing what would otherwise have been a disastrous fire, with considerable danger to the occupiers of the house.

with considerable danger to the oc-cupiers of the house.

Zulu, who sleeps in the basement of a large house in a fashionable quar-ter of one of our largest cities, was early one Sunday morning lately roused by an outbreak of fire, which had apparently been smouldering for some time between the floor of the dining-room and the ceiling of the room below. He, after repeatedly scratching at the bedroom door of one of the servants, succeeded in waking her. waking her.

Thinking the dog must be unwell, she det him into her room, and got into bed again, but was not allowed to sleep, as Zulu, sitting close by her bedside, kept "talking" to her (as she describes it) so vigorously that she suspected something must be wrong. On getting up the dog appeared so delighted that she followed him out of the room, and on looking into one of the rooms discovered the ceiling of the rooms discovered the ceiling burning.

Upon rousing the owner of the house, who immediately had the fire alarm rung (which was fortunately close at hand), Zulu seeming to know he had done his duty, rushed upstairs to his mistress and left the house with the children, evidently satisfied that he had fulfilled his part. On the fire brigade's arrival it was found that the fire had taken serious hold, and only required more air (which would have been given in another ten minutes by been given in another ten minutes by the collapse of the hearthstone, etc.) to burst into full flame in several places. The damage by heat and smoke was very great, and had air been admitted nothing could have saved the entire dwelling, as the joists between the flooring were burning from end to end of the room.— London Spectator.

Jasper Weewee, Tucson, Ariz.:

"Dear Sir: Having accidentally seen your name in a paper published in Tucson, I take the liberty of addressing you. I am compiling the records of the family whose name we bear, intending to embody them in a good-sized book, and shall be greatly obliged if you will kindly acquaint me with whatever particulars are in your possession relative to your ancestors, as far back as your knowledge extends, with dates of marriages, deaths, migrations, removals, prominent events in their history, etc. By so doing you will confer a great favor, which I shall be glad to reciprocate by any means in my power. Trusting to hear from you soon, I am, yours truly, intelligence, and is ambitious to rise in the literary world.

"In the fall of 1896," said Mrs. Rybolt, "Emma was taken ill. She was a close student and her work began to tell on her. She grew weak, pale and nervous, and com-plained of pains in her back, chest and plained of pains in her back, chest and limbs. A few weeks passed and she grew worse. The doctor said she was a victim of nervous prostration, and should have been taken from school weeks earlier. She gradually grew worse, her nerves were so tense that the least noise irritated her and she had a fever and a continual twitching in her muscles. The symptoms were much like St. Vitus' dance.
