Democrats and Republicans!

In fact it matters not with what political party you are affiliated, you should be a Protectionist in one respect. That is to say you should protect yourselves against loss by the destruction of your property by fire; and what is still more essential, protect your families against the loss of their support by the death of the person who produces that support—the husband the father. This latter protection can be obtained practically without expense, since it is possible, and in fact compulsory, for the life insurance company to safely invest the funds paid into their hands, and, after a term of years, return same with profits to policy holders, if living, on demand.

This matter should command your serious attention. Delay is dangerous and expensive. You will therefore do well to consult the agent in regard to the merits of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company of Philadelphia, which is justly reputed to be the most conservative and the most economical as well as the most liberal and equitable in its dealings with policy holders.

It is no experiment or adventure but by all odds the safest and best investment you can make, besides furnishing protection to your family.

The Penn Mutual is already over 50 years old and has over 200,000,000 of insurance in force, several hundred thousand dollars of which is in Sullivan county.

Senator Foraker Nominates McKinley and Governor Roosevelt Secon-and Others Second.

The Convention
Adjourns.

PHILADELPHIA, June 22.—President McKinley was unanimously renominated for president of the United States by the Republican national convention at 1:48 o'clock yesterday, and an hour and ten minutes later Governor Theodore Roosevelt of New York was unanimously selected to stand beside him in the coming battle.

The scenes attending the selections were tumultuous. Such unanimous demonstrations in honor of the nominees of a national convention have never been equaled perhaps in the history of politics in this country. It was a love feast, a jubilee, a ratification meeting.

A flutter of handkerchiefs filled the air, and a cheer went up from the delegates in the pit as Senator Foraker of Ohio, the ideal of militant Republicanism, strode toward the platform. Foraker is a grand looking man, with something of the imperiousness of Blaine and the dash of a Rupert about him. The air was surcharged with electricity as he mounted the steps, and when he turned about, standing there with gray eyes calmly sweeping the cheering thousands, the magnetic orator must have been conscious of his power to call up a storm that would sweep through the amphitheater. Below him, about him on either side, were banded men and women almost frantically waving hats, handkerchiefs and pampas plumes.

In full view of the convention he stood erect, his face as indelible as though chiseled in marble, waiting for the applause to cease. When quiet was restored, he spoke in part as follows:

"Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Convention—Alabama yields to Ohio, and I thank her, but Alabama has yielded by reason of a fact that would seem unimportant and superfluous, for she has yielded because our candidate has in fact already been nominated. He was named by Senator Wolcott in his able speech of Tuesday. He was nominated by Senator Lodge in his address of yesterday and by the senator from Indiana when he read the platform, and not only has he been nominated by them, but by the whole American people.

"From one end of our land to the other but one man is thought of for the honor that we are here to confer. He is the first choice of every man who wishes for Republican success next fall. So it is not necessary for me or any one else to speak for him. He has already spoken for himself and to all the world. He has a record replete with brilliant achievements, one that speaks at once his promises for the future and one that is his highest glory. It constitutes an example of triumphant success in the discharge of public duty. Four years ago we confided to him a most sacred trust. Behold what results! Our industries were prostrated. He quickened them with a new life and brought to our country unprecedented prosperity. When everywhere in this great land labor was idle, today everywhere our laboring men have employment. When we chose him, he found the mills and the mines of this great country closed everywhere. Today they are open, and while we are here deliberating we are sending their products to every corner of the world in a great commercial conquest. Under his guidance our national currency has been placed above reproach.

"In all the nation there is no man so fitted as the great leader who has conducted national affairs in the last four trying years.

"He has courage and experience. He has a stainless reputation and a blameless life that have endeared him to his country and won him the love and respect of the whole people. He is an ideal man. He is an ideal candidate. For all these considerations, not alone in behalf of Ohio, but in behalf of every state in the Union and of Republicans everywhere, I nominate William McKinley."

At the utterance of McKinley's name the audience began to cheer. The sight was a grand and inspiring one. In the pit delegates and alternates were cheering enthusiastically. Over the acres of spectators bedlam reigned. The hall was an angry sea of tossing color. Flags, red, white and blue plumes shot up as if by magic to crest the waves. Hats were lifted aloft on canes. Umbrellas were hoisted and twisted until they resembled dervishes.

On the press platform the newspaper men, with watches out, were counting the minutes. On the stage Senator Hanna, his handkerchief in one hand, a fan in the other, was spurring the vast assemblage to new endeavors. The raging storm did not seem to satisfy him. He seized a plume and whirled it about his head like a general leading his men to the charge. All at once a delegate bearing the standard of Kentucky rushed forward to the stage. The effect was magical.

Standards of the states were torn loose, and yelling delegates climbed upon the platform to rally around their leader. With state guidons pointed to a common center they made a canopy over the head of the Warwick of the Republican party. Ohio interlocked her staff with New York, Maine figuratively kissed her hand to California, and Minnesota saluted Texas. Then higher still climbed Hanna. He mounted a table where he could look out upon the cheering multitude. Beside him suddenly appeared a young girl arrayed in the national colors.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.
At this sight the cheers redoubled. The music of the orchestra was drowned in the awful din.

At 12:40 o'clock Chairman Lodge ordered a call of the roll of states for balloting for president.

The roll call was concluded at 12:50 o'clock, Hawaii casting the last two votes for McKinley.

A minute later Chairman Lodge announced, "There have been cast 926 votes, all for William McKinley, and I announce his unanimous nomination for president for the term beginning March 4, 1901."

The band struck up "The Battle Cry of Freedom," the delegates joined in the chorus, and there was an outburst of applause.

Then an immense imitation elephant walked majestically down the center aisle, causing much amusement.

Order was soon restored, because every one was eager for the nomination of Roosevelt to begin. Chairman Lodge appealed for quiet. He said it would be impossible to go on without order in the galleries. He called the attention of the delegates to the fact that there was much work for the convention to do after the nominations were completed.

As the name of Alabama was called on the roll of states for the nomination of candidates for vice president the announcement was made by the chairman of the delegation that Alabama would yield to Iowa to present a candidate.

Chairman Lodge then recognized Colonel Lafe Young, one of the Iowa delegates at large. Robust and vigorous in his physique and in his mentality, Colonel Young swung down the main aisle to the platform to do that which a single orator never before did in a Republican national convention—withdraw one strong and magnetic man as a candidate and present the name of another for the second office in the gift of the American people. He withdrew the name of Dolliver and offered that of Roosevelt.

Colonel Young was in Cuba at the time Roosevelt led his gallant rough riders up San Juan hill, and his reference to the governor's campaign was eloquent and touching.

The demonstration which followed the announcement by Colonel Young of Governor Roosevelt as the candidate of the young men of the country, who represented their desires and their ambitions and embodied their patriotism and Americanism, was not second to that accorded the president's name.

When quiet was restored, the chair recognized Mr. Murray of Massachusetts to second the nomination.

The names of other candidates for vice president were withdrawn, and the roll of states was called. At the conclusion of the call Chairman Lodge announced that Governor Roosevelt had received 929 votes, one delegate in the convention not voting. This delegate was Governor Roosevelt himself, who refrained from voting with the New York delegation.

Resolutions of thanks to Mr. Lodge and to Mr. Wolcott for their able services as presiding officers were unanimously adopted; also thanks to Mayor Ashbridge of Philadelphia for the hospitality of the city and to all officials of the convention. This closed the work, and

With state guidons pointed to a common center they made a canopy over the head of the Warwick of the Republican party. Ohio interlocked her staff with New York, Maine figuratively kissed her hand to California, and Minnesota saluted Texas. Then higher still climbed Hanna. He mounted a table where he could look out upon the cheering multitude. Beside him suddenly appeared a young girl arrayed in the national colors.

man. He is an ideal candidate. For all these considerations, not alone in behalf of Ohio, but in behalf of every state in the Union and of Republicans everywhere, I nominate William McKinley."

At the utterance of McKinley's name the audience began to cheer. The sight was a grand and inspiring one. In the pit delegates and alternates were cheering enthusiastically. Over the acres of spectators bedlam reigned. The hall was an angry sea of tossing color. Flags, red, white and blue plumes shot up as if by magic to crest the waves. Hats were lifted aloft on canes. Umbrellas were hoisted and twisted until they resembled dervishes.

On the press platform the newspaper men, with watches out, were counting the minutes. On the stage Senator Hanna, his handkerchief in one hand, a fan in the other, was spurring the vast assemblage to new endeavors. The raging storm did not seem to satisfy him. He seized a plume and whirled it about his head like a general leading his men to the charge. All at once a delegate bearing the standard of Kentucky rushed forward to the stage. The effect was magical.

Standards of the states were torn loose, and yelling delegates climbed upon the platform to rally around their leader.
