

In a Glass of Water.
Put a handful of glassed coffee in a glass of water, wash off the coating, look at it; smell it; is it fit to drink? Give LION COFFEE the same test. It leaves the water bright and clear, because it's just pure coffee.

The sealed package insures uniform quality and freshness.

County Seat Local and Personal Events Tersely Told.

Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Ingham are spending a few days at Eagles Mere.

Judge and Mrs. E. M. Dunham are taking a vacation at Atlantic City.

Mr. Chas. H. Warren of Sonestown, was doing business in town Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Reese Killgore of Dushore, were Laporte visitors Monday night.

The Little family reunion will be held at Lake Mokoma to day (Thursday.)

Mrs. W. B. Ritter and daughter Emma, visited Williamsport on Wednesday last.

Mrs. Orin Bennet and son spent the latter part of last week with relatives in York State.

Mr. and Mrs. Edw. Darling of Sonestown called on her sister Mrs.
Orin Bennett Tuesday.

Mrs. Edw. Schrader and daughter Hattie, spent Friday of last week with Muncy Valley friends.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs.
Martin Gallagher died Sunday morning. Funeral services were held on Tuesday.

Mrs. Chas. Tinklepaugh and daughter, Mrs. Kopp, of Williamsport, were calling on Laporte friends Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Higley left Wednesday evening for Bradford county where they will attend a family reunion and visit relatives for a week.

A party of young people of Eagles Mere visited Laporte last Tuesday night. The Mokoma pavilion was opened and dancing enjoyed for a time.

Mrs. Mae Melvane of Philadelphia, is visiting her parents Mr. and Mrs. Chas. R. Funston of this place.

Chas. R. Funston delighted his town friends this week with a sample of luscious peaches grown on his son-in-law's fruit farm in Delaware.

The Dushore base ball team defeated the Lopez nine on their own ground Friday afternoon. The score was 8 to 7 and Dushore is very proud of the honor.

Lawrence T. McCormick, and wife, proprietor of the Stratford Hotel and Hotel Bellevue Phila., were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ellery P. Ingham the early part of this week.

Scouten's Herald bids us bear in mind the "The Divine mandate which teaches that a liar is not to be believed when he tells the truth." As we have published no lies, and have never been impeached, we can read this "Divine mandate" with equanimity. How is it with you, neighbor Scouten?

The Sullivan County Agricultural Society will hold their annual exhibition at Forksville on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday Oct.
1, 2, & 3, 1902. Special arrangements are now under progress at the grounds and new buildings are being planned to take the place of the old ones.

A. E. Tripp and N. C. Maben have accepted good paying positions with the contractor who is laying the track for the new railroad from Monroeton to a point below Ralston. They are doing bridge construction of which it is said there is a considerable amount to be done.
In defending Judge Mitchell from the aspersions of Scouten, we said that the Judge had at Scout-en's request, granted him a new trial, and tried his case fairly and honestly. Answering this, Scouten called it "trash" and said it was "absolutely false." In his last paper he says that he had never said in any publication, that Judge Mitchell was dishonest. This is pretty twisty; but it is a hopeful approach toward decency for him to admit the Judge's honesty. Unintentional errors are committed occasionally by all judges, which are no evidence of their unfairness or dishonesty.

Mr. E. P. Ingham's Romance.

Mr. Ingham's book, "An historical-romantic novel called "At the Point of the Sword," is having a large sale in this section. Of the book the critics have some kind word to say comes the report from city newspapers. We find it well written and having in general a pleasant feature about the narrative. This tale purports to be a translation from the Dutch memoirs of Ernest Seur D'Artveldt, who lived and loved and fought in the dreadful days when the Duke of Parma was terrorizing the Protestants of the Low Countries, and when William the Silent was the champion of the new faith. It begins with the arrest of the parents of the hero and, taking D'Artveldt through his boyhood days, puts him soon in the midst of the wild whirl of things which made up the exciting life of that time and place. There is no lack of incidents many of which are strikingly novel and the interest and manner has often a freshness which is very pleasing. The dramatic qualities at the end of the story which are more common in such novels are not found in this tale. Mr. Ingham in his preface, disavows any responsibility for the opinions of his hero, but considering the fact that the better part of the story was probably written under trying circumstances, like the best work of Bunyan, Cervantes and Defoe, much that its author has to say in regard to the reflections of his hero will be of interest to those who believe him to have been a victim of circumstances.
Here is one of the passages:-

"Even when one is surrounded by the blackest night, when justice has been blind and the gods appear deaf; when truth seems vanquished, when friends disappear, when hope itself takes flight from the heart, there remains in the soul of the philosopher an abiding faith in the final justice of God. The world seems big, but how little it is when compared to the universe of the Almighty. This life sometimes seems long, especially in the days of care and suffering, but how short it is compared to the eternity which awaits us.
How vain it is, then, to bewail misfortunes heaped upon you by the wickedness of man. Rather rejoice as if a school for the soul. If you have been reviled at and treated unjustly, and still keep your heart open to the needs of human kind, rest assured that whatever the experience may do for your persecutors, for yourself it can work but good."

OBITUARY.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Meehan are business caller in town Monday.

Resolutions.

Since in the dispensation of Providence we have been bereft of a faithful leader by the death of Robinson Barnes, we would record our appreciation of the worth and helpfulness of his true christian character, and our gratitude to God for what he enabled our brother to do and be in his work of loving sacrifice, and for His consoling grace in time of affliction.

We extend to the sorrowing relatives and friends our sincere sympathy, praying God to continue to strengthen their faith and uphold and comfort them by His Grace.

In behalf of the Bethel Union Sunday School.

sionists was not as large as anticipated.

Social Ethics and Amenities at Eagles Mere.

At the Hotel Eagles Mere dinner Mr. C. Larue Munson, who is the prince of after dinner orators among us, our Chauncey Depew in fact, took occasion to express a wish that social conditions and habits might be more cordial and less reserved than has been the Eagles Mere habit. In this the writer joins most heartily, albeit we would hardly have ventured to express such a wish if it were not with the antecedent endorsement of such an unquestioned authority.

As to our social ethics as a summer resort, we are perhaps taking an assailable position when we say that in our summer community we have none. Admitting that there are exceptions to all rules and assuming the position that the exception proves the rule we venture the declaration that our people leave at home most of the ordinary social rules and come to the mountains prepared to lead a free and easy life of every one for himself.

The slight inaccessibility of Eagles Mere and its established characteristics have had the effect of creating a condition that does not invite objectionable visitors. Like a certain well advertised soap that is declared to be ninety-nine and four-tenth pure, you might go through the community here and find it almost, perhaps quite, one hundred per cent pure so far as its summer visitors are concerned.

It is perfectly safe to find a summer acquaintance in any one who is found here. The generally accepted rule does not require the after maintenance of summer acquaintances but the time is so short that to wait on the ordinary customs of approach results in the opportunity being carried away on an unexpected train.

If it is true that the sum of our happiness and pleasure is measured by the happiness and pleasure we give to others there are many of us who are missing a very considerable amount of it because we simply entertain ourselves and pass by the numerous opportunities where a smile or a pleasant greeting would give to others and bring to ourselves gratification that would last longer than the season.

It is simply wonderful what a large number of delightful people one may find here if conventionalities is only laid aside. Mr. Munson in his address expressed the hope that changes might come to in this regard—we join most heartily in his wish.

There is considerable room for enlistments in the limited number who give thought to the amenities of the place. It is quite easy to enjoy the almost entrancing beauty of the at the Carnival the other night but greater things might have been possible with an enlarged constituency.
A baseball game gives zest to an afternoon, wakens up the nervous organization and its effects are visible around the tea table and we do not doubt that in this co-operation would be gladly welcomed. We are surrounded by a country that nature has invested with charms not all of which have yet been discovered, and yet how few of us realize how much we might give pleasure to our friends from the cities if we were not quite too fully immersed in our own ideas to give a little time to unfolding these treasures to others.

We may sit in our cottages and on our porches without a gleam of brightness and think how beautiful the darkest night has become with the illuminated pictures that the liberality or thoughtfulness of others has made possible to us, and yet our background is comparatively dark and careless to others because we are too much immersed in ourselves to think for a minute that our cottages should be cheerful too, not only for those of us who are in them but also for those who would be able to enjoy a cheerful outlook as fully as we do.

The limits of this article will not permit the multiplying of such instances though there are very many of them that involve little or no expense and yet yield large returns to those who have the generous thought, because those who have such thoughts will derive real pleasure from the pleasure of giving to others.
