READY FOR STILL HUNT

Republicans Prepared to Block the Democracy's Game.

NEXT TUESDAY ELECTION DAY

Young Men Are Volunteering All Over the State to Work to Get out the Republican Vote, As Did Many Who Became Great Leaders.

[Special Correspondence.]

Philadelphia, Oct. 27.—With election day but one week off Chairman Penrose, of the Republican state committee, has practically completed his work of this campaign, and for the remaining days of the contest the whole responsibility of the canvass has been shifted to the members of the county committees, the members of the vigilance committees and the other active workers throughout the state, upon whom the organization depends to get the vote to the polls.

While Chairman Penrose and Secretary Andrews will remain at headquarters until after the returns are in, they are now sending out their last batch of mail and a number of the employees at the committee rooms are being laid off, as all their work has been done.

During the last few days the most earnest appeals have been made to the county chairmen to spur their associates in the county committees so as to leave nothing undone in the final week of the campaign to insure the polling of every vote possible on Tuesday next.

A DEMOCRATIC STILL HUNT.
It is true that the Democrats of Pennsylvania have not for years been so demoralized and absolutely without organization and that they have not undertaken to put up a fight in the open during the canvass this fall. But it is also true that this fact has led to apathy in the ranks of the Republicans.

Some believe it would be easier to get out a good Republican vote had the Democrats made an aggressive and spirited contest. The danger to the Republican organization lies in Republicans taking it for granted that they are going to win by a large majority on account of the apparent indifference of the Democracy.

While the party leaders of the Democracy have not figured in this campaign and their candidates have been remarkably silent it should not be overlooked that the rank and file of the Democratic party are always on the alert to gain any advantage for themselves or their party whenever opportunity shall present.

There is not a Democrat who ever held office or who has aspired to office who is not looking forward to the Presidential campaign of next year. The federal patronage of which they had a taste in the two Cleveland administrations is ever before them. They long to be restored to the post offices, to the fat berths in the United States mint and customs service and to the desirable positions in the various departments at Washington and in the consular service.

The Democratic workers know that if there shall be a large Democratic vote polled in Pennsylvania and a correspondingly small Republican vote the election returns from this showing great Democratic gains will give encouragement to the Democrats all over the country, will put new life in their party and start them out in fine form for the Presidential contest next year.

PARTY MEN ARE ALERT.

While Democrats are secretly speculating upon the national political situation and are determined to get any advantage possible out of the election next Tuesday, it is fair to say that many Republicans have been aroused to the importance of the situation, and from now until the ballots are counted will work zealously to have their party make a satisfactory showing in the returns. They propose to go among their neighbors and have them arrange to get to the polls early on Tuesday next.

They will impress upon them the fact that one vote for the Republican ticket on election day means more than a whole year of argument in the cause of Republicanism or in advocacy of its principles.

The votes are what count, and this is another case where action means more than words.

The stay-at-home Republicans are little less than assistant Democrats and it is to the stay-at-home Republicans that the party organization in this campaign is being urged to direct most attention.

If it be true that the Democratic managers have been carrying on what they might designate a "still hunt" campaign, it is more than ever essential that the Republican committeemen shall offset these tactics by going after the voters and seeing to it that they get to the polls.

The Republican who loans his horse and wagon to the committeemen to carry the voters to the election booth is as much a factor in the campaign as the wealthy man who sends his check to the state headquarters to help defray the expenses of the organization.

REPUBLICAN VOLUNTEERS.

The Republican who volunteers his services to work at the polls on election day is deserving to be enrolled among the "Honor Men" of his party. It is becoming to be the proper thing for young men to tender their services to the county committeemen for election day and in this way become acquainted with the voters of their respective precincts. The association and acquaintanceships thus made place the young men in line for consideration at the hands of the party leaders and frequently to advancement in unexpected quarters.

Lincoln, Grant, Garfield, Blaine, McKinley, Roosevelt, and, in fact, nearly all the men who have been signally honored by the Republican party started in politics working at their polling places on election day.
