

Prayed

To Be Released From Life.

Almost Insane From Nervousness.

Dr. Miles' Nervine My Salvation.

Do you enjoy life, or do you sleep so poorly that you are more tired when you get up than when you go to bed? Is your appetite failing, are you getting thin, does your head ache, back ache, eyes tire easily? These are symptoms of a nervous disorder, which should be promptly treated or fainting spells, mental and physical nervousness, morbid fears and loss of control will lead to insanity or mental irresponsibility. Strengthen the nerves with Dr. Miles' Nervine. It quickly supplies nerve-force and vitality to the weakened system, bringing sleep, appetite and health.

"I was almost insane with nervous trouble. Could not eat or sleep. Could see no pleasure in life; indeed, life was a burden to me, and I even prayed God to release me from it. Three doctors did all they could for me, all to no purpose. I was in despair of ever getting better when I saw the advertisement of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. I got a bottle, commenced taking it and wrote you for advice. I followed it carefully, taking your Nervine, Restorative Tonic, and Nerve and Liver Pills. Those remedies were my salvation. It is some months since I stopped taking the Tonic but I keep the Nervine in the house all the time, as it is a friend that I do not feel safe without. If any sufferer should doubt the truth of this statement, let them write to me and I will do my best to drive all doubt from their mind."—MRS. MABEL REDDEN, La. Jose, Pa.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTES.

A Possible New Field of Labor For Women of the Grange.

We have our farmers' institutes, and they are notably successful. We have not yet had our women's institutes, which might be equally as successful. In this we are behind our Canadian neighbors. They have developed this farm women's institute idea into a very practical form of work. No less than 300 of these meetings of farmers' wives have been held in Ontario the past season under the auspices of the board of agriculture. They have their own corps of women speakers, and a good attendance is reported.

The objects of women's institutes, as stated in the rules and regulations, are "the dissemination of knowledge relating to domestic economy, including household architecture, with special attention to home sanitation; a better understanding of the economic and hygienic value of foods with a view to raising the general standard of morals and health of our people." In practical working the speakers seem to have placed most emphasis on instruction in better methods of housekeeping and improvement of household conditions on the farm. While it is true that our farmers' institute programmes already give considerable attention to subjects of household interest, perhaps a separate series of meetings conducted for farmers' wives especially and largely by them would be desirable. More first class women speakers at institutes might at least be reasonably provided to discuss topics of peculiar interest to them.

Our Grand Work.

The grange's aggressive conservatism, its broad views of "equality to all and special privileges to none," "justly distributed burdens and justly distributed power," its elevation of the great producing class in the scale of general intelligence, the refinement and culture in our country homes resulting from its esthetic teachings, all taken together, have given it a standing among the institutions of men surpassed by none other and equaled by few.—National Stockman.

What is Scott's Emulsion?

It is a strengthening food and tonic, remarkable in its flesh-forming properties. It contains Cod-Liver Oil emulsified or partially digested, combined with the well-known and highly prized Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda, so that their potency is materially increased.

What Will It Do?

It will arrest loss of flesh and restore to a normal condition the infant, the child and the adult. It will enrich the blood of the anemic; will stop the cough, heal the irritation of the throat and lungs, and cure incipient consumption. We make this statement because the experience of twenty-five years has proven it in tens of thousands of cases.

FREE TRADE FRUIT.

WHAT COBDEENISM HAS DONE FOR THE BRITISH POOR.

It Has Greatly Enriched Those Who Get Their Incomes from Foreign Investments, to the Misery and Degradation of Wage Earners.

It often happens that the universal belief of one age of mankind—a belief from which no one was nor, without an extraordinary effort of genius and courage, could at that time be free—becomes to a subsequent age so palpable an absurdity that the only difficulty then is to imagine how such a thing can ever have appeared credible.—John Stuart Mill.

Persons who in the past could not be free from reverence for "the great truths" and "inexorable laws" asserted by the Manchester persuasion of political economists are now, with great unanimity, asserting that, while there seems no doubt of the theoretical basis of free trade, the experience of the last twenty years casts grave doubts on its practicability in adding to national wealth or its advantages to any except possibly the comparatively few who are living on fixed incomes. The theory of free trade is following such ideas as the Philologist theory, for instance, and in the future people will wonder how earnest and honest men could have thought they were reasoning when they claimed an advantage to the world through one country having the only market in which raw material could be sold, with all the machinery by which it could be converted to use, and hence command of the prices of both raw and finished materials, or that world wealth could be increased by placing as much cost for transportation as possible between producers and consumers.

The practice of free trade, however, has been very valuable to British manufacturers and to British carriers of the raw and manufactured products, and they, as far as possible, incite that state of mental servitude to which Mill referred. As has been remarked, "every little helps," and we find the Eugene Journal, published on the Pacific coast, doing its antic best to help by publishing a story that on the death of John Bright's wife Cobden went to him and said:

"There are thousands of houses in England at this moment where wives, mothers and children are dying of hunger. Now, when the first paroxysm of your grief is past I would advise you to come with me, and we will never rest until we have seen the corn law repealed."

And, it is added, "the offer was accepted and the work was done," without any reference to the £80,000 which Cobden got for the job.

It is hoped by this tale to convey the impression to those who have not taken time to study the question that the repeal of the corn laws, the great triumph of British free trade principles, was in the interest of the British poor. Cobden, with his backers, the "cotton lords," and his followers used two arguments. One was an honest hate of the landed proprietors, and the other was a hypocritical love for the poor. All will remember that in Cleveland's last campaign we were called on to hate all rich men, except brewers, and commiserate the wage earner, and we remember that the dinner pails went out of use. Any free trade campaign must be one of hate and false pretenses, with sniveling and mendacious assertions of regard for the mass they wish to ruin.

The British free traders repealed the duty on "corn." They repealed it that the poor man might have his loaf untaxed. The poor man voted for an untaxed loaf. He voted for it, not knowing that the measure was intended to destroy confidence in British agriculture and send him to the door of the mill, so that its "cotton lord" might have two men looking for one job. At first it did not work as Cobden and his employers thought. Mill, in "Principles of Political Economy," Book I, chapter xiii, section 2, says:

"During the twenty or thirty years last elapsed so rapid has been the extension of improved processes of agriculture that even the land yields a greater produce in proportion to the labor employed. The average price of corn had become decidedly lower, even before the repeal of the corn laws had so materially lightened for the time being the pressure of population upon production."

"For the time being" is well expressed. "The extension of improved processes of agriculture" stopped on the withdrawal of commercial confidence, though it was afterward resumed for a time. Much land was turned from wheat to pasture. The natural increase of demand was greater than the ability of foreign growers to produce, and the average price of wheat in England did not materially fall for some eleven years. But the foreign supply grew, and the home supply decreased. In the crop year 1854-55 the wheat crop in the United Kingdom, less seed, was 10,427,000 quarters of eight bushels, and in the crop year 1900-01 the crop was, less seed, 6,000,000 quarters, or 4.72 bushels per capita in the first period and 1.10 bushels in the second. Now Dornbusch's Grain and Seed List says the United Kingdom depends on foreign sources for three-quarters of its whole food supply and five-sixths of its bread stuffs.

No one can tell how many people have been driven off the land to foreign countries, to mill doors and to the London docks, whence "the bitter cry of the London poor" comes to our ears by this repeal of the corn laws, and British statisticians are now in doubt whether it is 25 or 33 per cent of their population that is in serious want. At the same time British military authorities are complaining that the recruits offering are through lack of proper Short Talks On Advertising By Charles Austin Bates.

No. 16. Some way or other, it always happens that the judicious advertiser succeeds. Judicious means many things. Some men better never advertise. Some things better never be advertised. Men who are not honest—who do not keep their promises—whose advertisements mislead, and whose stores disappoint—they had better let advertising alone.

"He never expects to sell to the same man twice."

There is a man in New York—a furniture dealer—who says that he never expects to sell to the same man twice. He uses all means to get the best of the deal the first time. Makes all the profit he can on the one sale, because he knows that the buyer will never come back—that he will discover the cheat.

Now, it wouldn't pay that man to advertise, and he knows it, and he doesn't advertise.

But a fairly honest business, conducted by a man who keeps pretty close to the letter of truth, it will always pay to advertise.

Most business men are careless in their statements. They have become so used to writing "biggest," "grandest," "greatest," "best," that they can only think in superlatives. They mean to be honest—probably are. They are merely careless, and failure is the price of carelessness in advertising. Maybe not absolute failure, but something very short of success.

Every advertisement should have careful consideration. All the discrepancies should be eliminated. No careless statements should be allowed. If you can't take time to attend to your advertising carefully, better cut it down. Cut off the parasites. Cut off novelties—programmes. Cut off the paper to whom you

"Failure is the price of carelessness."
