Farmers Being Taught the Value of Improved Highways.

The good roads special train which recently left St. Louis to tour ten states for the purpose of educating the farmers and rural residents in the advantages to be derived from good roads is meeting with an enthusiastic reception. Many local good roads associations have been formed, and thousands have attended the meetings held. With the party making the tour are officials of the government and several officers of the National Good Roads association, and three cars of the special carry roadmaking machinery. At some of the stops made by the train object lesson roads are constructed to show

BUILDING AN OBJECT LESSON ROAD.
What a good road really is. One of these simple highways was built near a Missouri town as follows:

First, the entire roadway between the fences was leveled. This was mostly done by pick and shovel work, although the plow was used on the sides. Then the road was given its proper arch and drainage, after which the center of the road for a width of nine feet was dug out to a depth of nine inches. In this trench were laid stones about the size of an egg, and these are regarded as the foundation.

On top of that was placed crushed rock about the size of the ends of your fingers and on top of that the surface of screened crushed rock. Each of these layers was rolled by a steam roller as it was put down. The soft earth at the side was arranged to carry off the water, and the road was finished. With the proper maintenance it will last as long as a Roman road.
