"There is but one sure cure for the drinking disease or habit, and that is the simplest of all," says What to Eat. "The cure consists in eating fruits. It will entirely destroy the taste for intoxicants and will make the drunkard return to the thoughts and tastes of his childhood, when he loved the luxuries nature had provided for him and when his appetite had not become contaminated by false desires and imaginary pleasures. No person ever saw a man or woman who liked fruit and who had an appetite for drink. No person ever saw a man or woman with an appetite for drink who liked fruit. The two tastes are at deadly enmity with each other, and there is no room for both of them in the same human constitution. One will certainly destroy the other."

Snoring in church is a breach of the peace in Tennessee, and it cost a Chattanooga youth, who enjoyed the noisy siesta, a double eagle. Notwithstanding the boy's protestations that his actions were without malice, the pastor caused his arrest and the learned court decided that the worship had been disturbed. The sympathy of sleepy deacons will go out to the youth, whom they will regard as more sinned against than sinning. It must be admitted that some sermons are great promoters of somnolence.

It seems almost incredible that in spite of the activity of the agents of the dairy and food department against violators of the law, with the thousands of prosecutions and convictions under the law for adulterating milk, milkmen all over the State should persist in putting adulterated milk on the market. In Philadelphia a day or two ago four milk shippers were tried for this offense, the State chemist testifying that the milk was very good aside from the water that was added to it. In addition to the heavy penalty one would think they would take into account the loss of reputation and trade.

It is said that honey is the only sweet that may be eaten in any quantity and for a long time without interfering with the action of any of the vital organs. Its food value is twice that of pork, pound for pound, and it has been noticed that persistent honey-eaters are not nearly so liable to disease of the respiratory organs as those who do not use it at all. It is calculated that the entire honey product of 60 bees during their entire life will not amount to more than a pound of honey, an amount that a man with a fair appetite would eat in a day without our thinking much about it.
