PHYSICIANS INDORSE OPPENHEIMER MOVEMENT

Presidents of Medical Societies, Attending and Consulting Physicians of Hospitals and Physicians of Highest Standing Administer the Oppenheimer Treatment.

The Oppenheimer Treatment marks a new era in the medical treatment of alcoholism. The medical profession in New York city, where the treatment was first established about fifteen years ago, has given it full recognition after the most careful investigation on the part of many individual physicians.

They have come to realize that because of its scientific character, simplicity of application, its proved efficiency and indisputable results in restoring the normal physical and nervous conditions of the indulger in alcoholic stimulants the Oppenheimer Treatment is without a peer.

Leading physicians throughout the United States have taken up the treatment and are administering it in their private practice. Among them are well known presidents of medical societies and attending and consulting physicians of private and public hospitals and institutions who have become representatives of the Oppenheimer Institute.

The late Dr. Cyrus Edson, a celebrated specialist and formerly health commissioner of the port of New York, was an enthusiastic advocate of the Oppenheimer Treatment and gave the following voluntary testimonial of the worth of the remedy:

"I have had a pretty extensive experience with the Oppenheimer Treatment, having witnessed its effect in perhaps fifty cases. I consider it of very great value, and have yet to see anything but good resulting therefrom. I have noticed no such secondary results as are frequently seen after other so called 'cures.' In fact, patients feel better and stronger than before in every way. The treatment seems to act as a general restorative and as a tonic, while absolutely removing desire for the stimulant, either drug or alcoholic."

The above indorsement of Dr. Edson is one of many of like character received from prominent physicians throughout the country who are sending patients to the Oppenheimer Institute for treatment.

Branches of the Oppenheimer Institute are being rapidly established in every section of the United States. It is the policy of the Institute to have a local physician become its representative in his locality, he being furnished with the medicine from the home office and instructed in its administration. Physicians who desire to co-operate in this movement for practical temperance are invited to correspond with the executive office of the Oppenheimer Institute, New York. Any one interested in the subject of alcoholism, its treatment and cure, is invited to correspond with the Institute, and full information will be forwarded.

A WORTHY PHILANTHROPY.

What the Oppenheimer Institute Has Accomplished in the Reclamation of the Destitute Inebriate.

One of the hardest problems of modern society is how to so benefit the destitute, almost hopeless, drunkard that he may be reformed and made a self supporting and useful member of the community. To meet cases coming under this head a clinic of the Oppenheimer Treatment for the cure of alcoholism has been conducted for many months in the Madison Square Presbyterian Church House, corner of Third Avenue and Thirtieth Street, New York City.

The first step in the emancipation of the drunkard is to conquer the terrible craving for alcoholic stimulants. That is generally accomplished within twelve to forty-eight hours, no matter how serious the case may be. The second is the bringing him into touch with uplifting influences that restore self respect and manhood.

Since the institution of the clinic a large number of cases have been treated with most satisfactory results. The free clinic is only for the absolutely destitute, those who are unable to pay anything, even the smallest amount, for the treatment. Some who attended came into the church house practically starving and without a place to rest. They "bummed" around saloons and slept in the parks. That they conquered the drink habit and are today engaged in honest and profitable employment affords the strongest possible testimony to the power and efficacy of the Oppenheimer Treatment.

One striking case may serve to forcibly illustrate the character and results of this work. Billy Mac, a notorious town drunk, had spent the greater part of the last twenty-seven years in jail or the workhouses because of repeated convictions of intoxication. He had long ago been given up as hopeless. The probation officer to whose care he was intrusted sold to the physician of the Oppenheimer Institute, "Doctor," if you can keep Billy Mac sober for one week after he is free and out of jail I will consider that you have worked almost a miracle." The doctor took the challenge and gave the patient the treatment. Within twenty-four hours his craving for liquor was gone, and he was on the highroad to recovery. At the end of eight days Billy Mac was like a new man. He said to the physician: "Doctor, I feel so funny. I don't feel tough any more. I used to want to sneak around to the back door of a saloon and get a drink. Now I enjoy home and playing with the children." The Oppenheimer Treatment had restored his manhood and had changed that drunken, sodden human beast into a kind and loving father. And for many weeks Billy Mac has lived the life of a self respecting, self supporting man.

This worthy charity has been entirely free and was the thought of a number of people who saw in the Oppenheimer Treatment a means by which the poor inebriate who desired to reform could have the opportunity of so doing. There is no distinction of race, creed or color, and no one should be deemed worthy and sincere is turned away. The press have highly commended the good work and excellent results obtained through the medium of the Oppenheimer Treatment.

The money spent for the world's drunkenness if directed into the right channel would make an end to poverty and do much to eradicate crime. So far as the individual is concerned, the question "Does drunkenness pay?" answers itself most emphatically from the pecuniary point of view. Yet there are thousands who delight in the delusions of drink, who believe that it is no harm so long as they are not detected by employers, customers or associates. They are cautious, hypocritical or occasional drunkards who measure the danger of intoxication only by the loss of money or reputation which it entails.

But for them the day comes quickly when the growing habit destroys discretion and fame, hope, love and thrift, crippled and enslaved by that squallid indulgence which has become a monstrous passion, are gradually killed and swallowed by it. As for the purse, so for the body, drunkenness pleads and proves its own guilt at once. Its theft, slow torture and final murder of the mind and soul are the most insidious, devilish and inevitable of its works.

A man of thirty-five recently said to a friend who had begun to drink heavily: "You had better stop before it is too late. I was even worse than you before I took the Oppenheimer Treatment two years ago and was cured. You know I always had a good paying position, but I could never get ahead. I was a 'good fellow,' treated everybody that came along, with the inevitable result that I got in such a condition that I had to have so much whisky every day. Fortunately I have a good wife, who instead of leaving me to a drunkard's downward career never ceased pleading with me to take the Oppenheimer Treatment. More to please her than with any faith in either myself or the treatment, I did take it faithfully, and, thank the Lord, I haven't touched a drop of any kind of intoxicating liquor since. In addition, I have put away a nice little sum in the bank, and next spring I intend making the first payment on a little home for my family. I can sincerely say that had it not been that my wife's entreaties induced me to take the Oppenheimer Treatment I fear that today I would have been a drunkard or in a drunkard's grave."

The Oppenheimer Institute of New York will gladly send full information about the treatment to any one making a request therefor.
