The Temperance lecture given under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. Tuesday evening, was thoroughly appreciated by those who had the privilege of listening to the lecturer. Mrs. More of New Mexico. Mrs. More is the possessor of a most charming personality and is a fascinating talker by which gift she held the closest attention of her audience. There was not a dull moment during the entire lecture, as the speaker has that rare ability of presenting, what are usually dry statistics, in a very interesting manner, besides relating many amusing reminiscence of her tours through the States. She is able to convey her hearers' imagination directly to the place of which she wishes to speak. Mrs. More has been before the public as a lecturer for many years, has traveled extensively, and her mission here is to build up the Sullivan Co. W. C. T. U. and the work of temperance reform in general, and her lecture has left room for thought and work along these lines.

HE KNEW THE ROPES

A Lawyer That Was Not Hunting Litigation Over Land.

It's the canny old bird that cannot be caught with the bird lime of litigation.

You've probably heard of Lawyer Hackett of Somerset. A little while ago he purchased some land over which there had been a lawsuit for years, until the parties had spent half a dozen times what the land was worth. Hackett knew all about it. Some of the people wondered why he wanted to get hold of property with such an incubus of uncertainty on it. Others thought that perhaps he wanted some legal knitting work and would pitch in redhot to fight that line fence question on his own hook.

That's what the owner of the adjoining land thought, says the Baltimore Herald. So he braced himself for trouble when he saw Hackett coming across the fields one day.

Said Hackett: "Where's your claim here, anyway, as to this fence?" "I insist," replied the neighbor, "that your fence is over my land two feet at one end and one foot at least at the other end."

"Well," replied Hackett, "you go ahead just as quick as you can and set your fence over. At the end where you say that I encroach on you two feet, set the fence onto my land four feet. At the other end push it onto my land two feet."

"But," persisted the neighbor, "that's twice what I claim."

"I don't care about that," said Hackett. "There's been fight enough over this land. I want you to take enough so you are perfectly satisfied you have got your rights, and then we can get along all pleasantly. Go ahead and help yourself."

The man paused, abashed. He had been ready to commence the old struggle tooth and nail. But this move of the new neighbor stunned him. Yet he wasn't to be outdone in generosity. He looked at Hackett.

"Squire," said he, "that fence ain't going to be moved an inch. I don't want the blamed old land. There warn't nothing to the fight but the principle of the thing."

Meteorological Cussedness.

At Westtown, Chester County, Pa., the Friends' big school celebrated its one hundredth anniversary recently. They have at the school a kind of diary, or log, which has been kept up continuously for 100 years, and in which the state of the weather every day during all that time has been noted down. The log was consulted for an auspicious date in the matter of weather for the anniversary, and it showed that every June 10 has been clear since the beginning of the school's career. Then some said: "Since it hasn't rained for 100 years on June 10 we had better avoid that date, for it will be sure to rain then this year." But others said that reason and philosophy indicated June 10 to be a day devoted, from some unknown atmospheric causes, to sunshining and blue skies. The latter set of people carried the day, and the school celebrated its anniversary on June 10. But it rained so hard that the guests had to sit around in tents.

She Would Have Stopped It.

Some time ago the wife of an old inhabitant of a Durham, England, village died, leaving a grown-up family behind her. The father remained a widower about eighteen months; then he entered the matrimonial state again. The youngest daughter, aged about twenty, on the day of the wedding, went to the village butcher's. After the usual courtesies, the butcher asked her: "Is it true your fether got married agyen?" "Aye, it's ower true!" said the girl. "Didn't ye want him to get married agyen?" "No; we wor aall agyen it, but aad fyuul wad hev his aan way. But Aad back if ma muthor had been living sh'd had put a stop tiv't!"

She Might Relent.

HE.
You treat me now with cold disdain,
But some day you'll regret;
I shall not go away and pine,
But I'm going out to get
A job somewhere and I shall work
And be a magnate yet.

SHE.

Go, leave my presence, since you say
You don't intend to fret;
You'll never, never see the day
That you'll make me regret—
But still, I wish you'd let me know
What kind of job you get.

Practicing Medicine.

"Doctor," sighed the fat man, "I guess it's no use. I've tried everything you've prescribed and grown fieshler all the time. Your latest recommendation was to ride horseback. I've done so faithfully for a month, but I've taken on eighteen pounds and the horse has lost 160."
"Ah! there's a scientific suggestion," said the elated doctor. "Try letting the horse ride you for a while."—Detroit Free Press.

Getting Even.

"Oh, yes," said the stocky man with the square jaw, "my married life is quite a happy one."
"Glad to hear it," said the thin man with the thin hair. "Got any particular system?"
"Well, yes. Whenever my wife gets into a tantrum I go out and find the fellow who introduced us and give him another licking."—Indianapolis Journal.

In the Air.

"Where do you live?" asked the police magistrate.
"I live a block above Stanton street, your honor, corner of Essex."
"But the officer says you live at No. 999 Houston street."
"That's all right, your honor, I live in the top flat."
"Prisoner discharged on the ground that he's an angel."—Mail and Express.

Jack Wins.

"Which suiter are you going to accept, Clarissa?"
"I can't decide, to save me, ma, which I like best; Harry is so timid, and Jack is so persistent."—Puck.

Lewisburg was visited by a most terrible rain and hail storm last Sunday afternoon. Many of the hail stones were larger than hickory nuts and covered the ground four hours after the down pour. The crops on the truck farms near the town were nearly ruined.
