The Republican state organization proposes to give every assistance and encouragement to the young Republicans of Pennsylvania to make the coming convention of the State League of Republican Clubs one of the most successful in the history of the League.

The convention, which will be held in Easton next month, promises to be one of the largest held in recent years, and the local committee of arrangements is planning an exceptionally good program for the entertainment of the delegates and other guests who will visit their city during the convention week.

Clubmen Meet Andrews.

Chairman Wesley R. Andrews, of the Republican State Committee, has had several conferences with officers of the State League, and he is heartily cooperating in their efforts to get the active Republicans of the state to interest themselves in the election of delegates to the convention by their home clubs.

It is pointed out that President Roosevelt has from the outset of his political career looked upon the Republican clubs as a powerful factor in the winning of campaigns, and he has never missed an opportunity to commend the work of the vigorous and progressive young Americans who are the bone and sinew of the Republican League of the Nation.

In his last national campaign the president insisted that the Republican national committee must give every consideration to the young men who were in charge of the organization of Republican clubs throughout the country, under the auspices of the National League, and he has since attributed much of the glory of the victory in that campaign to the Young Republicans who marched behind the club banners on which were inscribed the words "Roosevelt, Protection and Prosperity."

What do farmers, and particularly grange farmers, think of an agricultural paper that deems the grange of so little importance as to give a paragraph about a farmer's organization with 80,000 members? Some of the agricultural papers will get their eyes open later on.

Removal of the Craving For Alcoholia Stimulants Successfully Accomplished by the Oppenheimer Treatment.

Alcoholism in its advanced stages is a disease, not a vice, crime or sin.

The eloquent John B. Gough, a reformed inebriate, was a devout Christian. Besides, he stood upon the American platform as the apostle of total abstinence; with every motive for so-berity, but he fell many times and wept bitterly over his humiliation. He never dared pass a saloon unattended by a friend or member of his family. Reformed as he was morally and spiritually, he yet carried with him to his grave a diseased nervous system.

A man on whom the alcoholic craving has been fastened is as much a victim of disease as a sufferer from pneumonia or smallpox. It is a disease requiring special medical treatment, not punishment or imprisonment. As a disease, it is capable of bringing illness, infirmity, insanity, and, in some cases, attending death. It weakens the will, injures the body, degrades the manhood and destroys the earning capacity of the sufferer. Remove the disease, and you revitalize the man.

The fundamental principle of the treatment for alcoholism is the destruction of that craving which prevents the desire for intoxicating stimulants. Previous to inception of this method of treatment the efforts of the medical profession were directed to strengthening the mental control of the patient, unmindful that the liquor craving was not a perversion of idea, but a disease resulting from irritation of the nervous mechanism of the individual. The craving, being a direct outcome of neurotic impulse, necessitates treatment peculiarly adapted to overcome the itching cause.

Dr. Isaac Oppenheimer, a graduate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York (medical department of Columbia university, class of 1875), for many years devoted careful attention to the study of diseases due to opium and drug addictions.

In the tenement districts on the east side of New York among the suffering poor he found his field of study. There under the patios and the tragedy of homes and lives wrecked by intemperance he toiled with unwearying German persistence for years and solved the problem of finding an ideal medical treatment.

For some time he maintained a private sanitarium where cases along these lines were treated. His success in this work was so marked that it attracted the attention of a number of prominent New York business men and philanthropists who were interested in temperance reform. They realized the social and commercial value of a treatment that would actually remove the craving for alcohol or drugs without leaving any harmful after effects. After a most careful investigation they were convinced that Dr. Oppenheimer had such a treatment and financial endorsed to lead their names and financial support to the Oppenheimer Institute, organized for the purpose of extending its field of usefulness.

The Institute is conducted on thoroughly ethical lines, none but experienced physicians being employed. The management is on a strictly business basis. A large proportion of the medical profession is now co-operating with the Institute by referring cases to it for treatment. Every effort is made to fully merit the confidence and support of all physicians and to assist them by placing the facilities of the Institute at their disposal.

The work of the Institute, at first confined to New York city, is gradually being extended to many sections of the United States. It has recently been introduced into England and other countries, where it has met with striking success, receiving the direct personal support of many of the most prominent and influential persons.

Every one interested in the subject should write or call at the Oppenheimer Institute, New York city, and receive full information.
