general impression in Danville being that if a new trial was refused the prisoner would get off with a much lighter sentence, and when the heavy sentence of fourteen years was imposed it was a general surprise.

The crime for which Deitrich is sentenced is the murder of "Corkey" Jones in the bar-room of Deitrich's hotel in Danville late one night last February. Both men with some others were conversing in the barroom, Deitrich was flourishing a revolver and boasting of his prowess as a crack shot. Jones was reclining on a bench and remarked that he did not believe Deitrich could hit anything, whereupon the latter, who was intoxicated at the time, fired and the ball entered Jones' head near the eye.
