PROGRESSIVE EDUCATION.

Report of the Committee of the New York State Grange.

We believe that the grange should be to a greater extent than heretofore a school for the progressive education of its members, a continuation of the means and opportunities of the public schools. To this end we recommend that courses of study be arranged in such subjects as history and the natural sciences; that occasional lectures be given by persons of ability and note who may be available for the purpose, and that examinations be held on the subjects prescribed for study. We suggest that in the regular programmes of the lecturer there be an occasional review of a newly issued book. In certain favored localities it might be feasible to provide instruction in elocution, expression and general public speaking. The lecturer's hour would thus partake of character of drill and instruction in addition to the feature of entertainment.

The grange might furthermore contribute to the enlightenment of the community outside the gates by maintaining a simple course of public lectures and concerts, extending through the autumn and winter months, the fee for admittance not to exceed a nickel or a dime. In localities contiguous to colleges and seminaries such lecture courses might be supplied from the teaching facilities at trifling expense, even when including demonstrations with scientific apparatus.

Nearly all our rural communities are without organizations devoted to the improvement of musical talent. Singing schools which in their day were to some extent crude and unsatisfactory nevertheless exerted an important influence on at least a part of the people who participated in them. Might not the grange become the instrument in many cases for attuning the people to the appreciation and practice of good singing? The girls and boys who have been favored with competent instruction in the colleges and conservatories of music would often be glad for an opportunity through the grange singing class to repay some part of the debt they owe to the community that has nurtured them.

In addition to the recommendations already made with reference to the teaching and study of agriculture, the grange could well undertake some practical work, like the maintenance of competitive gardening among the children of the grange or of the public schools of the town or district, including an autumn exhibition of the fruits of the little gardens. The outlay for such an undertaking need not exceed the cost of a single oyster supper.

Mrs. Fred Korn of No. 175 Wells St., Wilkes Barre, Pa., says:—"I have been very nervous for a long time, suffering so much from persistent headaches and could not sleep well at night. I was so bad last spring that I had to have the doctor and again last fall. I was very poorly and seeing Dr. A. W. Chace's Nerve Pills recommended I got a box and used them I have had no headaches since and sleep well. They are an awfully good medicine. I also gave some to my little boy for nervousness and they did him so much good. I recommend them highly.
