Settlement has been made by the Lehigh and Wilkes-Barre Coal Co. with the families of the nine miners who were killed by white damp at Honeybrook last month. This was the first accident under the new liability act. The company will pay each widow $30 a month until her youngest child is 12 years of age. Each family will also get two loads of coal free every month.

Maryland is sending invitations to her sons and daughters scattered everywhere to come to a grand reunion, and is making extensive preparations to give them a week of right royal entertainment when they come. Old Home Week covers the dates, October 13 to 19, and there will not be a moment of that time that will not thrill with the spirit of hospitality for which the Old Line State is famous.

Handsomely decorated and illuminated boats on Lake Mokoma Thursday night of last week marked the beginning of an annual lunar pagentry on Mokoma by "the outing" conducted by Profs. Ford and Muller. All available boats on the lake were brought into use and made handsome with skillful decorations. A large number of spectators witnessed the performance and expressed themselves well pleased.

The Village Improvement Society will meet at the home of Mrs. Frank Ingham next Tuesday evening. A prompt attendance of all the members is requested, as business of importance is to be transacted.

Miss Mary Heaton of Celestia who was employed by Mrs. Phillip Kerge, had the misfortune to break her arm last Tuesday.

When hundreds of ham and chicken sandwiches fell at Eagles Mere during a thunder storm the other day, folks wondered what miracle was being performed which should cause food to drop from the heavens says a dispatch from the mountain resort.

For twenty minutes the sandwiches fell, with now and then a chunk of chocolate, to vary the monotony. Some olives and a few pickles also came along now and then a pie.

It was explained a few hours later, when a picnic party came along and told how a tornado had ripped up things at the grounds. The table had been set and the dinner bell was about to be sounded when a rip-snorting wind came down through the woods and carried off every bit of food.

Strangely enough several layer cakes were left behind, and the women who baked them were humiliated. They said that some unkind person might think they were too heavy to move.—Bellefont Gazette.

REST ROOM IN STORE

Suggestion of Value to Merchants Who Want Country Trade.

PLEASE THE FARMER'S WIFE.

Provide Accommodation For Women and Children Who Spend a Day or an Afternoon in Town—Headquarters With Home Comforts.

Some merchants wonder why so many of the women on the farms keep mail order catalogues constantly on hand and buy articles from the big city houses which they might purchase from the home stores to equal advantage. Did it ever occur to you that the town merchants who make any special provision for the comfort of farmers' wives and daughters who patronize the stores are scarcer than hens' teeth? A recent writer in Collier's has something to say which may offer a valuable suggestion in the matter of keeping and increasing home trade.

Suppose you're a Kansas farmer's wife, says this writer. You have driven into town for street fair day in the wily heat of the prairie summer, your husband, the three small children, including the baby, under the big yellow umbrella strapped to the wagon seat. Shopping done, the wagon unhitched in a vacant lot, lunch eaten in its shade, the man goes back to the holiday street. The woman stays behind to mind the children. She might go to a store, to be sure, where she would be in every one's way. Well meaning folks would give the children candy until their little hands would stick to everything they touched, including their mother's skirts, and there would be nothing to do but go out into the street and walk, then return and wait and wait. So all that long afternoon she sits on the ground, holding the baby in the little patch of shade. The sun beats down; clouds of dust envelop them; the children's hands and faces become grimy. Finally, at 6 o'clock, the man returns, hitches up. They watch the balloon ascension and start home. Then what? Supper to get, milk to strain and put away, dishes to wash, chickens to shut up, calves to feed and the tired babies to bathe and soothe to sleep. The woman had looked forward to this outing as a much needed change. When she finally gets to bed she is too tired to sleep. Her holiday had been spent under a wagon on a dirty vacant lot. The shade of the trees of her own yard would have been pleasant.

"This," writes a woman from Carbondale, Kan., "is the condition in the average town. There are numerous places where the men are welcomed, where they can spend an hour without a thought of being in the way. Should not these busy women have a place of their own where, when their shopping is done, they can take their babies and visit and rest and go home refreshed and strengthened rather than utterly worn out?"

Collier's asks if this is a case for some plutocrat with money to donate for the establishment of a town club for country women or should it be looked after by the township or the county? It appears that it should be looked after by the individual storekeepers. Here is a fine opportunity for some enterprising merchant who wants to sell goods to the women who live on farms.

Suppose you are a farmer's wife and you drive into town for a day's recreation and shopping. Instead of having to keep the children by the tied up team and eat a cold luncheon on the grass or in the dusty street you take the little ones to the enterprising store of Blank & Co., general merchants. In the store building is a commodious room set aside for women and children. There are cozy chairs, tables with the newspapers and magazines in easy reach, a couch or two for lounging or napping and a motherly woman on duty to look after the children.

You find in this store a place where you may wash the dust of the drive from your face and do up your back hair and see that your hat is on straight. You make the rest room your headquarters for the day, leaving your bundles there as well as your children. You are free to go about town on errands, returning at noon to eat your luncheon from one of the tables, perhaps with a cup of coffee hot off the little stove provided for that purpose. You meet here also some of the women who live in town and who drop in to rest and chat while doing their shopping. When the time comes for you to bundle the children into the wagon and start for home you will feel a great deal better than if you have had to undergo the experience of the woman described above.

If Blank & Co. offer you such a club-room, where will you do most of your trading? With Blank & Co., of course. Thus the firm gets more than value received for the expense of maintaining the clubroom and in addition has the satisfaction of making the farmer's family comfortable for the day.

Any merchant who has the enterprise to open such a rest room in connection with his store and advertise the fact is bound to get profitable results.

Who is going to be the first to make this sensible bid for the patronage of farmers' wives?

Value of Good Roads.
The farmer is by no means the only one who benefits by good highways. Every town merchant is vitally concerned in the good roads movement, whether he is aware of the fact or not.
