A Pound of Honey.

"When you eat a spoonful of honey you have very little notion as to the amount of work and travel necessary to produce it. To make one pound of clover honey, bees must deprive 62,000 clover blossoms of their nectar, and to do this requires 2,750,000 visits to the blossoms by the bees.

"In other words, one bee, to collect enough nectar to make one pound of honey, must go from hive to flower and back 2,750,000 times. Then, when you think how far these bees sometimes fly in search of these clover fields, oftener than not one or two miles from the hive, you will begin to get a small idea of the number of miles one of the industrious little creatures must travel in order that you may have the pound of honey that gives them so much trouble.

"It may also help you to understand why the bee is unamiable enough to sting if you get in its way. When one has to work so hard to accomplish so little, it is quite irritating to be interfered with."

ANOTHER FOREIGN CROP FAILS

French Peasant Girls Refuse to Sell Their Hair.

A recent cable dispatch from Paris declares that another crop besides wheat which has failed in France this year is that of human hair. July is the month when the human hair merchants go to France from the United States and England to visit the towns and villages of the Limousin, of Brittany and Auvergne, where the annual hair markets are held. High prices are paid in New York and Chicago for "postiches" of French growth, which are best suited for the requirements of the present fashion of large hats and of the latest modes of coiffure, but the peasant girls of Limoges and Brittany have now abandoned the national bonnet which hitherto concealed their shorn heads, and season they refuse to sell their hair, saying that they need it for their own use. This strike of the peasant girls has given a disastrous setback to the French trade in human hair, and the dealers, unable to do any business in France, are leaving there for the Tyrol and other countries.

Advantage of Cash.

The man who does business on a cash basis can often secure better terms than the man who wants a long time to pay his account with the wholesaler. Some of the bargains secured by the mammoth houses who have plenty of money on hand all the time are surprising. The small retailer who can pay for goods immediately undoubtedly gets some of the bargains in the wholesale world. A hundred credit men know his record. They pass no sleepless nights in thinking out whether it is safe to trust such a man, and he is going to get a better deal from his wholesaler than his competitor who sells on credit. The trader who does business on a cash basis often gets the cream of the buying market. He usually gets those who have money fifty-two weeks in the year. The question of giving credit enters at all times into the life of almost every one. It is almost impossible to make a rule never to extend credit, but when it is necessary there should be a hard and fast understanding about payment.—Boot and Shoe Recorder.

Up with the Times.

"I was detained in getting here," explained the caller who had come to look at the flat. "I boarded one of those pay-as-you-enter cars, and the conductor refused to change a five-dollar bill. So I had to get off, hunt up change for the bill, and take a later car."

"That's all right," said the agent of the building. "I'll show you the rooms now."

After half an hour's inspection the caller declared himself satisfied. "I think I'll take the flat," he said. "By the way, my moving expenses are going to be pretty heavy, and very likely I shall be short of cash for a while. If I should pay the first month's rent a couple of weeks or so after moving in, I presume it would be all right?"

"No, sir," grimly answered the agent, who did not much like his looks, anyhow. "This is a pay-as-you-enter house."—Youth's Companion.

"Smack Dab."

A Doniphan County teacher asked her charges recently to observe the shadows the trees cast at noon, and report to her.

"Well, James," said the teacher, when school took up in the afternoon, "what did you notice?"

"The shadow was smack dab against the tree," was the ready reply.

"What?" said the teacher.

"Smack dab against the tree," replied Jimmie.

"Where did you come from?" she asked the lad.

"Missouri," he replied.

"O-o-o-h!" murmured the teacher, apparently satisfied.

Three Months Counting Leeches.

The chamber of deputies has begun the debate on the report of the naval committee, M. Pichon gave many illustrations of the naval administration's red tape, quoting the number of signatures up to the minister of marines that were necessary before a glass costing 75 centimes that had been broken aboard a flagship could be replaced and how one commission's duty, occupying three months, was to count the number of leeches that had died in naval pharmacies.
