State Aid Reaches Needy

That the State aid extended to tuberculous sufferers through the department of health dispensaries is reaching the really needy, is evidenced by careful statistics that Health Commissioner Dixon has just compiled.

These statistics which are based upon a total of 9,363 patients examined at the dispensaries, of whom 6,728 were found to have tuberculosis during a period of seventeen months ending Dec. 31, 1908, show that the average family income in the homes from which the patients came was $24.63 per month. The average number of persons in the family was 4.38 and the average per capita income was $6.60.

"These facts are particularly gratifying," said Dr. Dixon. "With the thousands of tuberculous patients we are asked to help, it is quite possible the state's charity is imposed upon. We are fully justified, however, by the tabulated records, in drawing the conclusion that the really needy poor among Pennsylvania's unfortunate victims of tuberculosis are the ones that are being helped, just as the law making the appropriation contemplated."

An interesting study of the possible source of infection can be made from the dispensary statistics. In 2,404 cases, the disease was contracted in the home from another member of the family. This shows how important is the work which the visiting nurses of the dispensaries are doing in teaching the members of the household how to guard against being infected by one of the family who has the disease.

In 474 cases the possible source of infection was a fellow employee. Fully alive to the danger of this source the State Department of Health has communicated direct with all the large employers of labor throughout the state, urging the necessity frequent medical inspection and calling attention to the state's dispensaries, where suspected cases among the poor will be examined at any time free.

Important To Supervisors.

Hargest has handed down an opinion to the State Highway Department in which he declares that legal proceedings may be instituted against supervisors who refuse or neglect to furnish to the department information concerning the mileage of roads in their districts. Under the Jones "dirt road" bill passed last winter, the supervisors are obliged to supply this information but many of them have ignored the third notice given them.—Bloomsburg Republican.

WHAT HE WANTED.

Rode a Horse When on Duty and not a Crow.

A certain officer of the Royal Horse Artillery, having his battery divided into half batteries which were garrisoned over 40 miles apart, by road, applied that he might have an allowance granted him for an extra charger, it being his duty to frequently visit both portions. The war office ruled that this allowance was inadmissible, saying, "Measured by the ordinance map, as the crow flies, the distance is found to be only 33 1/2 miles."

For a time the officer was non-plussed, but an idea struck him and he seized his pen and wrote:

"There would appear to be some misunderstanding regarding my application. I am asking for an allowance for an additional charger, not an additional crow. I do not ride a crow. I ride a horse."

He got it.—London Tits Bits.

Mennonites' Founder.

The Mennonites take their name from Menno Simons, born in Witmarsum, Holland, in 1492. He entered the priesthood of the Roman Catholic Church, renounced Catholicism early in 1536 and was baptized at Leeuwarden. In the course of the following year he was ordained a minister in what was then known as the Old Evangelical or Waldensian Church. From this time on to his death, in 1559, he was active travelling through northern Germany and preaching everywhere. The churches which he organized as a result of his labors rejected infant baptism and held to the principle of non-resistance. A severe persecution began to make itself felt against his followers, the Mennonites, and having heard accounts of the colony established in the New World by William Penn, they began to emigrate to Pennsylvania near the end of the seventeenth century.

Some Advice.

The following was sent by a countryman to his son in college not many years ago:

"My Dear Son—I write to send you two pair of old breeches, that you may have a new coat made of them. Also some new socks, which your mother knit by cutting down some of mine. Your mother sends you $10 without my knowledge, and for fear you will not spend it wisely I have kept back half and only send five. Your mother and I are well, except your sister Annie has got the measles, which we think would spread among other girls, if Tom had not had them before, and he is the only one left. I hope you are well and will do honor to my teachings. If you do not you are an ass, and your mother and myself are your affectionate parents."

Sociable Spiders.

Our native spiders are notable for their extreme sociability. Of those which are spinners, each one constructs its web apart from those of its kind, and those which hunt, pursue their prey alone. In other countries, however, there are spiders which live in communities, and one such, a native of Mexico, is described by M. L. Digue. It is known as the mosquero, and makes a large nest in oaks and other trees. Here the spiders live gregariously, and along with them in the nest is found a minute beetle and another species of spider. The beetle is said to act as scavenger. Parts of the nest of the mosquero are hung up in the houses during the wet season to get rid of the flies.

The First Language.

No one of the existing languages has any legitimate claim to be considered the original of the family of languages, standing to the other as Latin, for instance, stands to Italian and French. Of an original primitive language of mankind the most patient research has found no trace. All of them—Assyrian, Phoenician, Hebrew, Arabic—are sister languages, pointing back to an earlier parent language, which has long disappeared. Since the historical period man has done little in the way of the absolute creation of language. The work had already been accomplished ages before the birth of written inscriptions.

Witchcraft.

The number who perished in the period of the witchcraft delusion will never be known. In every country, through fifteen centuries, the superstition went on piling up its victims. In Geneva 500 were executed in three months, 7,000 were burned at Treves, 600 by a single bishop of Bamberg and 800 in a single year at Wurtzburg. At Toulouse 400 perished at one execution. A judge at Renny boasted that he had put to death 800 witches in sixteen years. A thousand were executed in a single year in the province of Commo. "Witches" were executed in Spain as late as 1780.

"Tea with Children."

"Tea," says the London Chronicle, "in the garden is one of the best-established of our mid-Victorian institutions. Mr. E. V. Lucas—who is a connoisseur of the caddy—recalls in his essay, 'The Divine Leaf,' a story of the late Arthur Cecil, who once encountered the following inscription in a garden at Kew: 'Tea, plain, 6d.; tea, with shrimps, 9d.; tea, with children, 1s.'"

Mere Humans.

A Wilkesbarre magistrate has decided that a cow has precedence over an automobile and does not have to wear a red lantern on her tail when standing in the road at night meditatively chewing her cud. Human beings apparently must take their chances.

Dr. Hale once told of a minister who preached on an hour on the four greater prophets, and then, when his exhausted congregation thought he was through, took a long breath, turned a fresh page, and leaning over the pulpit, said: "We now come to the more complex question of the minor prophets. First let us assign to them their proper order. Where, brethren, shall we place Hosea?"
An irascible old gentleman in a black pew rose, took his hat and stick, and said as he departed: "You may give him my place if you want to. I'm going."

Short Talks On Advertising

By Charles Austin Bates.

No. 44.

Intelligent stock raisers know that a certain amount of feed is necessary to keep an animal alive. They might feed that amount as long as it lived, and it would never gain a pound.

"Intelligent stock raisers know that a certain amount of feed is necessary to keep an animal alive."

There is no profit in that kind of feeding. The kind that builds flesh rapidly. If it takes twenty pounds of food each day to keep a sheep alive, twenty-five pounds a day will make it gain flesh. It is the extra five pounds that brings profit. The first five pounds amount to nothing, nor does the second, or third, or fourth five pounds. It is about the same way with advertising. You have to do a certain amount to overcome the passive resistance of the public. You have to do a certain amount of advertising to make them wake up to the fact that you are in business at all. You have to pay a certain amount to keep your advertising alive. What you pay above that amount brings profit. Some advertisers fail because they do not use enough space. They use barely enough, or sometimes not quite enough, to make the advertising self-sustaining. A little bit more would make it profitable. It is better to advertise a little bit too much than not quite enough.

"You have to do a certain amount of advertising to wake them up to the fact that you are in business at all."
