On Friday evening of last week a surprise party was given to Verma Gumble it being her fifteenth birthday. Today (Friday) is St. Patrick's day, the most generally observed holiday of all the Saints; the day of Shamrock and Green ribbon which speak of the respect and loyalty the wearer has for his country and his people. True to the land which gave their parents birth, Irishmen the world over will celebrate the day as usual. There is something exquisitely touching as well as noble in this fidelity to and passion for the land of our forefathers, yet it is a passion which in no way conflicts with loyalty and service to the country which the foreign born person may choose for his permanent home. The multitude of American persons of Irish birth and descent are not less loyal to this country by reason of the devotion they bear the land so dear to them and which is all the dearer for the wrongs and trials it has endured for centuries. Robert Emmet uttered true words when he said "The spirit of a nation never dies." This is especially true of the Irish who will praise and cherish the land they love and the memory of those who have suffered for their fidelity to the cause of Ireland, till the end of time.
