Every Man an Advertiser,

Boards of Trade, Chambers of Commerce, and Business Men's Associations are institutions which a small city or town cannot, as a rule, sustain with any great success Nevertheless it is within the power of each citizen to help the business moral and intellectual interests of his community. He can constitute himself an advertising agent, taking advantage of every opportunity to speak of its merits. This is far better every way than running a place down. Of course if one is so disposed he can find some blemishes delights to do that and conceal the takes pleasure in airing 'family troubles. With both it is mean, despicable business

While by no means shutting one's the same time, make prominent the class. many good things which every place possesses. Many a town, not so well favored with natural advantages as LaPorte has flourished because its people with true civic pride have worked incessantly for its welfare, and there are towns with great natural resources that have languished, because its inhabitants were not alert to their opportunity. All of which goes to show that a town is just what its people make it. Its condition, prosperous or otherwise, accurately aeffects their attitude and disposition.

The Green Back Inflation in The Civil War.

On the breaking out of the great civil war the National government but their sale was slow, and at a lished next week.

heavy discount. The treasury was empty, and money must be had. Soldiers must be fed, clothed, armed and paid. On the 25th of February 1862 Congress passed an act authorizing the issue of $150,000,-000 of legal tender notes, generally called "green backs," and they immeditely got into circulation. On the 25th of June following congress authorized the issue of $150,000,000 more of the legal tender notes. There were more issued afterwards, and altogether the amount was about $400,000,000; about $346,000-000 of which is still in existence and composes a part of our paper money.

Previous to the issue of the legal tender notes, the state banks had supplied the country with as much persons for Alternates to the State Convention, representing the Prohipaper money as was needed for the transaction of business, but many of these banks were rotten institutions, and the notes of nearly all country banks were at a discount in the cities. The natural result of the inflation was to stimulate all kinds of business to the highest degree of activity, provide work for all laborers at high wages, and supply cash for every deal. These signs of prosperity seemed to make the war a blessing, instead of a eurse, and reconciled the people to the increased burdens of taxation. As the inflation increased, prices of everything kept rising continually. A shrewd merchant of my acquaintance, who had been in business for a long time, and always paid cash for his goods went to stores in the General Assembly, representing the Republican party.

One person for Representative in and had always traded, and told them he had come to buy goods at their lowest cash prices and had the money in hand to pay, to his surprise, they did not seem glad to see him, were reluctant in showing him goods, and he told me they acted as if they had rather he would not buy anything, as prices were rising so fast.

In the fall of 1862 the writer met farmer friend of Wyalusing, at Pittston, where he had just finished selling a boat load of grain, buckwheat flour, potatoes, turnips and butter, of his own production. He said it was the best time to sell things he had ever known prices
