We are informed that snow flakes accompanied the rain on Wednesday morning. This is a little unusual for the first day of June; but then, why should we doubt it? Most anything is liable to happen in an enterprising town like Laporte.

The fears of timid people as to possible danger from the comet were unwarranted and but showed the foolishness of borrowing trouble. If the fear and suspense which attend a Fourth of July celebration could only prove as groundless what a happy people we would be, but that is too much to hope.

Nearly everyone by this time has had a good look at Halley's comet which for the past week has decorated the western skies from early evening till about ten-thirty with its head and tail. Some people say that the comet causes the young winter we are now enjoying (?) and some have other ideas, but at any rate, comet or no comet, we think old winter is lingering just a little too long in the lap of spring and judging from the leaky nasal probois, the rumble of the coal wagon and the cool feeling generally, we think the ice man will not over exert his vocal organs for some time.

Wreck on Lehigh Valley.

One of the worst wrecks the Lehigh Valley Railroad has ever known occurred at Stull on the Bowman's Creek Branch on Saturday night, in which two lives were lost and thirty one critically injured.

The dead are Edward Pollock who was on his way to North Mountain on a fishing trip, and Alfred Eppley, a boy eight years old, who was on the train with his parents. Mrs. Margaret Moe of Stull was the most seriously injured and her age, 76 years, and the fact that her body was badly crushed and her hip broken, makes her recovery doubtful. The lady was returning from Avoka where she had been to decorate the grave of her husband.

The train was made up of an engine and three cars. The engine and first car passed over the switch safely but the front truck of the second coach, which was the ladies' car, straddled the switch points, causing it to topple over. The locomotive, baggage, and smoking car although derailed remained upright.

The passengers in the middle car were thrown in a heap amidst the wreckage and were penned in so fast that the car had to be chopped with axes before the injured could be released.

Circumstances attached to the accident convince the officials that the wreck was due to a tampered switch. A train had passed safely over this switch a little more than an hour before and everything was at that time in good condition. The lock of the switch was found after the accident lying near the switch stand.

The Sailors' Line.
 "Pop, what is the line the sailors talk about?"
 "It is a certain degree which the ships cross in their voyages."
 "Oh! I always thought the line was where they hung the wash of the sea."

Short Talks On Advertising
 By Charles Austin Bates.

No. 46.

Most all advertising nowadays tells the truth. Most all business men have learned the lesson that even slight misrepresentation in their advertisements causes a loss of confidence, which more than offsets any transient gain that may be made by exaggeration. In the past there has been more or less overstatement in advertising. It has made a great many people doubt everything that they see in an advertisement which is in any way out of the ordinary. This feeling is not right. Probably ninety-nine out of every hundred advertisements of reputable business men are absolutely true. Sometimes overstatements of values and reductions in prices seem too extraordinary to be truthful, but those on the inside of any business know that there are times when it actually pays to lose money on a certain article or a certain line of goods. The reliability of an advertisement should be measured by the reputation of the advertiser. If he does not lie in his ordinary business and social relations it is fair to suppose that he does not lie in his advertising. It is a matter of principle, and a matter of business also. Every statement that is made in an advertisement ought to be carefully weighed, and even the appearance of untruth excluded. A truthful statement by an honest man in a good paper will bring returns every time. The best paper in which to advertise is the one which possesses the confidence of the community in the highest degree. The high character of the paper will throw a mantle of credence over all the advertising in its columns.
