BOYS' SAILOR SUIT.

Pattern No. 3226.—A jaunty sailor suit such as is here pictured, consists of a blouse with removable shield and knickerbockers, having the fullness at the knee confined by elastic-run casings. A deep sailor collar is part of the blouse, and the sleeves are plaited to cuff depth. A slit pocket is made at the left side of the blouse and the knickerbockers have hip pockets.

The pattern is in 5 sizes—4 to 12 years. For a boy of 8 years the suit requires 3 7-8 yards of material 36 inches wide, with 5-8 yards of contrasting material 36 inches wide.

HOW TO ORDER PATTERNS.
For each pattern desired, send 10c (in stamps only) to this paper. Give No. of pattern and size wanted.

BREAD ON THE WATERS.

Recompense, Just Like in the Stories and Plays.

A Cleveland paper tells of a tramp who came to the back door of a residence and begged for shoes. The mistress of the house gave him a good pair and said to him: "There, put these on, and if you want to show your gratitude, just happen around here some morning after a snowstorm and clean off our sidewalk."

Some time after the lady was awakened early one morning by some one scraping the sidewalk in front of the house. Looking out, she found that there had been quite a heavy fall of snow, and there she beheld the tramp to whom she had given the shoes, clearing away the snow from the sidewalk with an old broken shovel. When he caught sight of his benefactress at the window he raised his tattered hat to her, and his self-imposed task finished, went away without saying a word or even asking for anything to eat. Three times the same thing happened during the winter, but the man never asked for compensation or food.

A New York woman once invited a ragged, dirty beggar into her house, and after he had had a comfortable meal and some clean clothing she sent him away with words of encouragement, telling him that he was made for something better than tramping; that it was a shame for a man of his apparent intelligence and good health to be getting a living in such a disgraceful way.

This lady became embarrassed financially and was in sore need of money. She asked a friend where she could borrow $500, but he could not accommodate her, nor did he know of any one who could not. Next day, to her great astonishment, a man, total stranger, as she thought, called at her house and told her that he had heard she was pressed for money, and that he had come to lend her the amount she needed. With growing surprise she asked how it was that a complete stranger, whom she had never seen, was willing to trust her. The man then explained that he was the tramp whom, a year before, she had taken to her home and treated like a brother; that her kindness on that occasion had been the turning point in his career, had made a man of him again; that he had prospered beyond his deserts, and that ever since he had gotten on his feet he had been wishing for an opportunity to show his appreciation of what she had done for him.

The Rare Gift of Courtesy.

Courtesy includes not merely social kindness, graces of speech, absence of rudeness, but honorable treatment of all business associates, and of all the fellow-citizens with whom a man of affairs may have business to transact. It is not American to keep one citizen waiting all day at the door because he is poor, and to grant another citizen an interview because it is believed he is rich. Wisdom is not confined in a purse, and frequently much wisdom may be learned from a poor man.

A Strange Survival.

It is illegal to sing, hum or whistle the "Dead March" outside of a church or a cemetery. At one time this law was very strictly enforced, and even to-day a soldier found guilty of singing or otherwise rendering the famous march other than at a military funeral would be severely censured.—London Household Words.

Fools get married and wise men stay married.—From Life.

Immediately after each Fourth, when people are sobered by the long roll of dead and wounded, they exclaim, "Let us have a sane Fourth next year." But as the remembrance of the carnage fades away so fade away the demand for a sane Fourth, with the result that when the great national anniversary again comes round there is the same old sad story to tell.

We all recognize the righteousness of the War of Independence and the invincible patriotism seen in the willing sacrifice of life and limb and health in winning the nation's freedom. We also recognize the fitness of annually commemorating the heroic deeds of our fore-fathers, that the fires of patriotism may burn with equal ardor in the breasts of their descendants. But to do that it surely is not necessary to engage in practices that kill, maim and bring sorrow to hundreds of homes every year. Yet that is what people do when they fire off giant crackers and other death-dealing explosives.

Separation of the Sexes.

The separation of the sexes seems to have been formerly by no means an uncommon practice in the Church of England. In fact, Edward VI.'s prayerbook specially mentions that at the communion service "the men shall tarry on one side and the women on the other." The papers of a church in Westmoreland include elaborate directions for the division of the sexes at its services. All wedded men were to be placed first before any of the young men, and all young wives were to "forbear and come not at their mother-in-law's forms"—this was presumably before the days of the pew—"as long as their mother-in-law lives."

New English Submarine.

A seven foot sink-or-swim submarine showed good form at a preliminary trial in an English swimming bath. Its propeller shaft can be shifted to right or left, thus steering the boat to port or starboard. On each side is a fin, a curved flexible sheet of alloy. No rubber is needed, as the fins and propeller take its place. By working the fins like a large fish the boat goes down deep or comes up to the surface. The boat is run by electric motors and storage batteries.

Dialogue.

"Teacher, does cocoanuts really grow on trees?"
"Why, of course, Jacob," was the answer. "Where did you think they grew?"
"Why," said he gravely, "I thought the monkeys laid 'em." — London Globe.

Short Talks On Advertising
By Charles Austin Bates.

No. 32.

It isn't so much what you say as where you say it. Put a preacher in a desert island and what he says will not have much effect. If he is in the pulpit, talking to 500 intelligent people, his words will have weight. They will do some good.

"Put a preacher on a desert island!"

What you say in an advertisement, and how you say it, doesn't matter nearly so much as where it is said.

You might have the most attractive advertisement that was ever designed, offering the biggest bargains that ever were offered, and if you put it down cellar under the coal it would never sell a cent's worth of goods.

A poorly written advertisement, poorly displayed, in a good newspaper will do some good. Of course, a better advertisement would do more good, but the style of the advertisement must be thought of after the medium has been selected.

When you put your ad in the best newspaper in your community you are addressing the wideawake, progressive part of the community. You are skimming the cream. It is safe to say that nobody whose trade is worth much will fail to be a subscriber to a daily newspaper. Generally speaking, the best newspaper will attract the best people—the intelligent people—the people who have money in their pockets to buy what they want and need.

Do not preach on a desert island. If you should climb into the pulpit of your best newspaper you could address a congregation of the best people in your community every day.

"You are skimming the cream."
