About Political Bosses.

An army without a general to plan the campaign and direct its movements so that its members will work in unison with one accord to achieve a common purpose, would be no better than an armed mob, and accomplish nothing but defeat. A political party without leaders would be as ineffective as an army without a general.

There is an unreasonable prejulice against the word "boss" applied in politics. In order to be effective where a considerable number of persons must work together harmoniously in any kind of business, whether in mine, workshop mill or factory, one of them whether he be called foreman, director, overseer or proprietor, must of necessity be the "boss." Even the animals and insects have their leaders.

Leaders of men are born and not reated by education, wealth or accident, The man with superior natural abilities for the successful management of public affairs, political questions and party interests will sooner or later become, by common consent, a party leader and it is no disparagement of his usefulness to call him a ''boss'' The editor of the "Review of Reviews" has injured the Republican party in Pennsylvania by representing Senator Penrose as a greater boss than even the late M. S. Quay. He says: "Mrs Penrose An excursion from Nordmont, has become more masterful as the manager of the Philadelphia and state Republican Organizations than was his former political preceptor, Matthew Stanley Quay. This year's State Republican Convention was Mr. Penrose's very own. The convention was in session only a little more than one hour. Mr. Penrose had arranged everything and his program halted at no point. Nothing more perfect in a mechanical way has ever been seen in our politics.'

That Harrisburg convention was composed of several hundred delegates coming directly from the people in the counties, and in every instance they were intelligent, practical men and not fools. Does any man believe that Senator Penrose could have run that convention lected, accurately catalogued and in any other way than in accordthe books are easily accessible, ance with the views and wishes of wrote the platform (as the editor alleges) it was because the convention knew he was the most capable person to do it. It was adopted debates is due, in a large measure, unanimously because every member believed it to be true as Holy Writ, and that it expressed their views exactly.

> After criticising Senator Penrose for writing it himself the editor is honest enough to say of the platform: "It is fairly true too." He might as well blame Washington for leading the American armies in the Revolutionary war, or Grant the Union armies in the civil war. as Senator Penrose for leading the Republican party in Pennsylvania.

"The soldiers were mustered; the drums were beating and the fifes playing, and the banner flying, as my father at the head of a company marched away. I could not restrain my sobs, and I found mother was keeping me company as she hugged me to her bosom. We returned sadly to what now seemed our lonely home.

"Mother had to hire a man to help do the work on the farm. We called him a 'hired man,' but he could not do half a man's work, and his compensation was but little more than his board. He was quite an old man, and had been so afflicted with rheumatism that one arm was stiff. I do not think it would have been possible to find an able-bodied young man that could have been hired for farm labor, so closely had the recruiting officers searched for soldiers.

"Letters came occasionally from father, which mother eagerly read, first to herself and then to 'Cretia and me aloud. There was a great deal about long marches and poor rations, and scanty clothing and slow pay; and once in awhile he would write about a battle in which the 'red-coats,' as he called them, got the worst of it. He often wrote to mother to keep good courage, 'for the Yankees will beat the British in the end.

"' 'Cretia, being a couple of year solder than I was, and a smart, active lass helped mother a great deal, and could even plant corn and rake hay. She often sent for Mattie Orrison to come and work with her in the field or in the garden, and would return the favor by helping Mattie when called upon. They called it 'changing works.' Mattie's given name was Martha. Her mother was a widow, generally called 'Widow Orrison,' and resided on a farm adjoining ours.

Passenger Train Lassoed.

A Williamsport & North Branch passenger train on the way to Halls ing Accounts of Executors, Administrawith a crowd of Sunday travelers from Eagles Mere was lassoed a trailing telephone wire Sunday evening. When the engineer found that his train was entangled in the wires he brought it to a standstill so swiftly that many passengers thought that the train was wrecked. All were shaken up. The wires caught on the top of a coach and before the train came to a halt one pole was dragged down and the line otherwise damaged. The train crew cleared the track of the broken and trailing wires and the unseated pole.-Towanda Review.

Economy often defeats its own ends. Sometimes economy is extravagant. Sometimes not spending is more expensive than spending.

So in advertising. That is an economical expense. I call it an expense to avoid argument. In reality it is an investment.

In a ten-dollar advertisement the last two dollars pay better than the other eight. Maybe an eight-dollar ad. wouldn't pay when a ten-dollar ad, would. Maybe that extra space is just what the ad. needs to lift it out of oblivion-to make it promi-
