On his way to his home there he was obliged to stop over one night at Senbright, and this story is told of his little visit; He was recognized by several people, and when he entered the dining room one of them came forward and asked him to occupy a seat at his table. He was quietly introduced as Mr. Long, and his literary reputation did not enter at all into presentations. He was placed bethe side a very beautiful and charming young lady, and after a while the conversation developed somewhat as follows: "Mr. Long, your name is quitefamillar. WASHINGTON AND BURR.

Alleged Cause of the Break D tiesen the Two Gront Men.

An old inwyer, speaking of drainatic incidents in court, said: "Jere Clemens, a once famous United States senator from Alabama, told of a trial in which Burr appeared for the defense of a man charged with murder. My recollection is that the trial was in the southwest.

"When Burr addressed the jury, it was night. The guilty man was in the room. He had been the principal witness for the prosecution, but Burr Incilearned that this witness was the assassin, and in closing his address for his client he picked up two fighted candles from the table, and, holding them in the face of the witness referred to, he exclaimed; "Gentlemen of the jury, there is nature's verdict. Now write yours,' At that moment the witness fled from the room. After Cleinens told this story he wrote a historical novel called "The Rivabe or, The Times of Hamilton and Beer.' In that book he wove the incident into one of the chapters. The book is out of print and has been for many years. But it had a great sale, particularly in the south, before the civil war, for Clemens was a typical southern orator and a mith of wonderful personal magnetism. The object of the novel was to make Burr a hero and to besmirch Hamilton's character.

"In one chapter where Burr was high In the esteem of Washington the latter is represented as reading a letter from Hamilton in which Hamilton detailed some scandalous gossip about Burr. Burr was standing behind Washington during the reading of the letter." Washington, incensed at the contents of the letter, turned quickly and saw Burr, to whom he said. How dare you read my letter over my shoulder?' Burr, as Clemens represents, stung to the quick. drew himself up and replied with all the hauteur of his nature. When your majesty addresses such an luquiry to me in the manner you have, the only reply decency can prompt is. Aaron Burr dayes to do anything." This, Clemens avers, was the cause of the break between Washington and Burn."-New York Sun.

THE FOOD WE NEED.

Substances For Which the Body Is Suffering -- We Lae Enclosely Too Stuch Bult.

The function of the taste doubtless made even in the nineteenth century, sustains a much more important relation to digestion than has been generally accorded to it, says Dr. Kellogg, Food to be digested must be appetizing. Footi which nausentes does not stimulate the secretion of the fluid necessary to digest it either in the month. of the stonately. The sense of usste may be regarded as a sort or regulation. Hence it is an important property of food that the source of tasto may be stimulated and that it muy have nu opportunity to excretize its selective and controlling functions. When one has enter a sufficient amount of simple, whotesome food, the sense of teste beforms him of the fact by deciming to receive more. A perfeet rule for anatiention would be to cher: cheh nimal of food until there is heft only it mandeas remmint. It is useless to swallow ouch a residue, as it ena have to autritive value. When McConnelisburg, Penna food is taken in Dils way, the sense of taste has an opportunity to say "enough" before too much has been swallowed and thus affords a perfect means of adapting the amount of food taken to the needs of the body. A careful study of this suggestion will also show that the sense of taste, if allowed to net in a normal way, will select those substances of which the body is in great need. For example, if the blood is impoverished and needs an entra supply of altrogenous food there will be a craving for such foods. as nuts, legumes and possibly eggs and milk or some other substance containing altrogen; A curious numbers to this function is found in some insectivoraus plants, which as this been shown by recent experiments, refuse to capture insects or pay attention to fragments of ment placed within their grasp except when the soll upon which they grow is lacking in nitrogenous elements. By supplying a tertilizer rich in nicogen these so called earnivorous plants conse to be curnivorous and behave wholly like other plants. The same principle applies to the use of fat making sub-scores, such as starchy and alourinous funds, such as nuts and cerculs. The writer has frequently observed in this patients a craving for fits, which disappeared entirely after the patient had made a gain of 20 or 30 toumbs. The taste was no doubt intended by the Creator to be a perfect guide to the quantity and quality of food to be taken and not simply a means of guatatory pleasure. Unfortunately it has been torribly debnuched and perverted from its normal function. Men and women treat the printe as the planist treats liks histrument, touching it in various ways simply for the purpose of provoking pleasurable sensations, with by remard winnever for the possible needs of the body or the possible damsize which may be enused. The sense of taste, that wrongly educated, bechines percented, and its indications became confuned. Abnormal cravings are developed, which demand satisfaction in the use of ten, coffee, while and other integiennis, mustard, pepper and other condiments, large quantities of salt, pickles and rich and savory dishca of various sorts, together with Clerical Sareasm.

A clergyman on a recent Sunday gave out the following notice, says The Christian Endeavor World:

parade will be held, as usual, at the close of this service. Members wil line up just outside the church door make remarks and state at the women who pass, as is their custom. "Any member known to escort young woman to church like a man

Vinegar is a diluted form of acetic neid and has been known from the earliest period. Wine vinegar is made from wine fees and inferior wines, principally in France, the finest being obtained from white wines. Mait vinegar is procured from an infusion of malt which has previously unifergoue fermentation or from apple elder. Vinegar in the form of lotions is a valuable external stimulant.
