J. Tallafiero Bridges of Hancock, Md., is rather extensively engaged in the lumber business. He is operating nine steam mills and employs 200 men and 50 head of horses and mules. He has recently bought the timber right of 100 acres of the Amos Stigers property on the ridge north of the Tonolet Baptist church. Twenty-seven men are at work peeling the bark on the job. This tract contains a nice bunch of oak and poplar, with a fair sprinkling of pine. Mr. Bridges is a hustler, and a genial good fellow withal.

Since James M. Lake has moved down to the Baptist church at Tonolet and taken up his residence in the new parsonage he has made such a change in the appearance of things that the old church goes will hardly recognize the place. The fences have been repaired, the fence rows grubbed out and the yard at the parsonage neatly fenced, sodded and planted in flowers. We are glad to note this. Here is one of the oldest burying grounds and places of worship in the county, and for the sake of its past history and its present importance, we hope the place may always have the best of care.

Fine weather for corn-planting. Sabbath school at Jerusalem church last Sunday was largely attended. May God bless the young people who are taking such an active interest in the work. The teachers were Harry Plessinger, Daisy Smith, Rosa Morris, Kerie F. Layton, and Lib Vanclef. We would be glad to see some of our older brothers and sisters attend and lend a helping hand.

Susan B. Morgret, after spending a week or two over Siding Hill, returned home Tuesday.

THE SOLDIERS' HOME.

An Interesting Extract from a Letter from Mrs. J. Milton Tritt, formerly of the Cove to her Niece, Miss Irvie Hull, of This Place.

CADILLAC, MICH.

"Yes, Irvie, I must not forget to tell you about the Soldiers' Home I visited while away. It is located about two miles outside the city limits of Marion, Indiana. It is a National institution, and is said to be the finest in the world. I only wish I could describe the beauty of the buildings and grounds. Everything, down to the kitchen floor, is scrupulously neat and clean."

"The barracks are the buildings in which the men sleep. They are large and built of brick, have nice verandahs and are beautifully finished, and everything necessary for the comfort of the soldiers."

"There are twelve of these barracks, and 2,364 soldiers are enrolled. The dining hall and kitchen are curiosities. 1080 men can be seated at one time for meals. You may imagine what it takes to board that many men. When the cook decides on mackerel for breakfast, 500 pounds must be fried; and when cod fish are used 250 will answer. It takes 1500 pounds of turkey if a Thanksgiving dinner is to be served; and, if onions are to accompany the roast, 16 bushels must be cooked."

"In order that they do not have to borrow flour from the neighbors, they must provide 2000 pounds a day; and during the mince pie season, if they do not have 80 pies for a meal, some one of the "vets" has to do without a piece. Eighty waiters are required in the dining room to serve the meals."

"In addition to eating and sleeping, there have been provided for their amusement and benefit a large assembly hall, where the men meet for religious services, lectures, &c., a nice opera house where the finest attractions appear, a billiard hall, and a reading room with all the leading journals, magazines, and daily newspapers."

"Of course, there is a hospital where the sick receive the very best attention, and even a jail forms one of the group of buildings. Where everything is so suggestive of comfort, it would seem that no one who has any gratitude in his heart, should be bad while enjoying such hospitality from even the United States government."

"There seems to be perfect order—not a loud spoken word or a gesture of disorder manifests itself. "But I must close this letter which has already grown too long."

Horse-back riding has become the latest fad among the young ladies of Hancock, and it seems they have chosen Main street as the particular place for enjoying their new exercise and pleasure. The next thing in order should be a street sprinkler or water-works.

Sunday was Dewey Day at Hancock Station. At least one hundred people crossed the bridge to get a look at the Admiral and his wife as they passed here on their way to Chicago. They arrived here about three o'clock on a special train, said to have been equipped as finely as any in the world, which stopped several minutes for water, during which time the "Hero of Manila" and his bride seated themselves at the rear end of the last coach, where the crowd had a full view of the distinguished personages. They arrived and departed and not a cheer was heard nor a handkerchief waved.

"Little" Fulton County has a bad case again of railroad fever. This time it is to be a branch of the Baltimore & Ohio, standard gauge, and is to extend from Cherry Run through the Big Cove to McConnellsburg, the county seat. The people of Fulton county have been fooled so often with railroads built on paper that it will be hard to make them believe the road will be built, until they see the iron horse plodding along through the valleys.

Last week Charles Hite in Cumberland Valley had two splendid cows and two large hogs that had been bitten by a mad dog eight weeks ago. The animals had been carefully watched during this time. Last week they took rabies. A cow that was sold at Elias Hook's sale had been bitten also and was killed. She was sold at auction on conditions that if rabies broke out she was not to be paid for.

The question often asked and never answered, is, "When will newspaper correspondents learn to attend to their own business and quit writing fiction which is only applicable to themselves?"

Marcus Antonius well said that such people's dispositions will be suitable to that which they most frequently think on: for the soul is, as it were, tinged with the color and complexion of its own thoughts.

The beauties of such people's character are not like the night blooming Cereus, closed against the glare and turbulence of every day life, and bloom only in shade and solitude, and beneath the quiet stars; but, they are sowing gap seed by the bushel, and Oh! what a harvest they shall reap if they ever receive their just dues.

They are like Rev. Joseph Kipling, father of the great novelist, who is in America at present, inclined to have fits of absent mindedness, and by their actions you cannot tell whether they have souls above the clouds of their native soil or not. How careful we should be of words and actions, since they mean so much to others.
