

ARTILLERY IN REALITY

England's Indian army the artillery means much more than the guns of the forts and the elephants of fortifications. It is the elephant artillery—a heavy men, heavy elephants, heavy bullocks and heavy ammunition. The guns, which have a long range, are just as valuable in South Africa. But the heavy brigade as yet never had a chance of distinguishing itself.

It falls to the lot of few men to make the discovery that they are standing on a mine of gems of fabulous value. The good fortune has recently befallen T. C. Bassett, a mining expert, whose keen eye and a stroke of luck converted him in a moment from a poor man to be master of millions, says Tibbits. Mr. Bassett, who is attached as expert, to a mining corporation in South America, was on a short visit to relatives in California, when it occurred to him that he might utilize some of his time prospecting for gold. His wanderings took him in the direction of the famous Death Valley, where one day he mounted a small conical hill in order to get a better view of the surrounding country. He was about to descend the hill, to continue his tramp, when a patch of blue at his feet arrested his attention. Bassett's trained eye recognized in the blue patch the "blue float," which is a sure indication of the presence of turquoises in the soil. He lost no time in locating a claim, was soon hard at work with pick and shovel. His most sanguine expectations were more than realized, for at the depth of six feet he found the "boxite vein," which was thickly studded with beautiful stones. The deeper he dug the more magnificent were the gems, and within a fortnight he was able to return to San Francisco with no less than seventy pounds of the most brilliant and flawless turquoises that have ever been discovered.

Timely information given Mrs. George Long, of New Straitsville, Ohio, saved two lives. A frightful cough had long kept her awake every night. She had tried many remedies and doctors but steadily grew worse until urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle wholly cured her; and she writes, this marvelous medicine also cured Mr. Long of a severe attack of Pneumonia. Such cures are positive proof of its power to cure all throat, chest and lung troubles. Only 50c and $1.00. Guaranteed. Trial bottles free at W. S. Dickson's drug store.

The alarm about the early exhaustion or insufficiency of the world's wheat supply may be somewhat abated by the facts in connection with an application for charter of a new Canadian railroad. The title of the proposed road is the Quebec & Lake Huron, and its route is from the mouth of French river, on Georgian bay, across the Ottawa at Mattawa and the St. Maurice at Grandes Piles, to Quebec. The distance is 440 miles, or 135 miles shorter than from Parry sound. Included in the line is a great plateau, embracing 3,000,000 acres of forest and farming lands, now out of reach of railroads, and said to be capable of easily supporting a population of 500,000, says the Pittsburg Dispatch.

The region through which the new road will pass is well adapted to wheat growing, and the plain includes great grain elevators for the accommodation of this resource. Incidentally the project calls attention to the fact that Canada has other large tracts of undeveloped territory adapted to the growing spring wheat. This era, added to that about to be opened by the Trans-Siberian railroad, will certainly postpone for some years the shortage predicted by Sir William Crookes. Meantime the wheat farmer is not receiving a price for his product indicative of any fear or speculative belief in the failure of the supply.

What inconsistent creatures we are! None of us like the idea of growing old; and yet we are anxious for the flight of time. When the day drags and seems long, it worries us. The boy is eager to be a man. We complain of the shortness of life, yet squander time as though we had a million years to live. The young miss tries to look old and the old maid makes frantic efforts to appear young. Many people live in constant misery, and add to all the other woes and misfortunes of life by thinking of the terrors of death.

The Tattooing Rage. European women have a craze for tattooing at the moment. They cause themselves to be decorated with dragons, serpents, griffins and such things, and call the figures tattooographs. The Queen of Greece is said to have had her ankle tattooed with some small figure, and a Parisian woman, hearing this, went her one better, and had a spider web tattooed on her shoulder. She claims to be delighted with the result, for she says when in full dress the "tattooograph" gives her an air of mystery and attracts people to her shoulder, if not to her side. It is not stated that the mouse has become a popular figure. A woman who could be guilty of such folly is not far removed from a savage, and it is safe to say that this fad will not be adopted by American women.

Up in the Air. The cyclone story is vouched for by the Minneapolis Better Way. It is that a cow which was picketed on a rope was picked up by the cyclone and carried 60 feet, where she remained until the storm had passed, when she quietly climbed down the rope and resumed her grazing.

Story of a Slave. To be bound hand and foot for years by the chains of disease is the worst form of slavery. Geo. D. Williams, of Manchester, Mich., says: "My wife has been so helpless for five years that she could not turn over in bed alone. After using two bottles of Electric Bitters she is wonderfully improved and able to do her own work." This supreme remedy for female diseases quickly cures nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, headache, backache, fainting and dizzy spells. It is a godsend to weak, sickly, run-down people. Cure guaranteed. Only 50 cents. Sold by W. S. Dickson, druggist.

It is estimated that an average of eight matches are used daily by every man woman and child. It is said over 2,000 cars were put out of service on the Baltimore and Ohio system the first of August on account of not having the required M. C. B. couplers and power brakes.

Advertise just as you eat—regularly and in reasonable quantity. You don't wait until you are starved before you eat but go to your meals at a set time every day. One meal right after the other, year after year, makes you grow fat and keep well. Advertise just as you drive a nail. Not one big blow and then stop for ever, but with reasonable blows, one following the other. Even if your one blow is hard enough to drive the nail home, it is likely to go crooked or split the plank and spoil the job. Advertise just as the farmer plants corn—not a big sack full at one time in one place and then stop but a few grains at a place in regular time. In other words, advertise with business sense. Keep at it week after week, month after month, and success will surely come by and by.

The Editor and the Preacher. The press and the pulpit have more charity than all the balance of the community, and the fact is aptly illustrated by an exchange as follows: A preacher once said: "Editors dare not tell the truth. If you did you would not live. Your newspaper would be a failure." The editor replied, "You are right, and the minister who will at all times tell the bare truth about his members, alive or dead, will not occupy the pulpit more than one season, and he will not be necessary to leave to us to bury." The pastor and the pulpit go hand in hand with water-proof brush and soap, and magnifying glass, and microscope, and grape-vine, and the great painting-making apparatus.

Some very absurd stories concerning the new mercantile tax law have been circulated in the rural districts, and there is considerable misapprehension among the farmers. For instance the story was circulated in some sections of the county that a farmer could not sell his butter and eggs, cattle or anything else without paying a state tax. Of course this is a mistake. The law only applies to merchants and dealers—persons who keep store or are engaged in mercantile pursuits—and no farmer, huckster, cattle dealer or peddler is liable to the State mercantile tax, because he is not a merchant in the meaning of the law.
