

Concerning Nosedbleed.

It is so common in childhood that little account is ordinarily made of it. Where it occurs repeatedly without apparent occasion, however, efforts should be made not only to check the immediate attack, but to ascertain the cause of the trouble. It is known that heart disease, congestion of the liver and condition of the blood predispose to nosedbleed, and considerable injury is frequently felt to the system of childhood may be the result of serious constitutional diseases. Most commonly the cause is local.

The best means of checking immediate attack is pressure on the finger on the upper lip beneath the nostrils. A small piece of absorbent cotton or a piece of handkerchief may be held inside the lip and tightly pressed against the gum from without, thus compressing the arteries of the upper lip that supply the nose. These can only be felt pulsating in this way.

The meantime blowing the nose must be avoided. Plugging the nostrils both in front and behind is a last resort to keep the nose from actual peril. The predisposing cause of nosedbleeds has been said, commonly local. Careful examination of the nose by the physician before always necessary in such attacks. Diseased conditions in which the vessels are abnormally and unnaturally turgid, depression of the child's system caused by repeated attacks, should not infrequently be recognized. If the trouble is to systematic weakness, attention is to be especially directed to an improvement of the general condition, while if the child is themselves weak, repeated attacks of nosedbleed are indications of the need of change of climate or of prophylactic exercise at home.

Formation of scabs or scald attended in childhood picking of the nose, should not be overlooked as a cause of nosedbleed. Watchfulness may be required to prevent the formation of an unfortunate habit, but neglected spots must also be treated with ointment or other means of healing.—Medical.

Bravery of Woman

Gradually shown by Mrs. Bowling, of Butler, Pa., in a years' struggle with a malignant stomach trouble that distressed attacks of indigestion. All remedies failed to relieve her until Electric Bitters. After two months, she wrote: "I am wholly cured and can eat anything. It is truly a grand cure for the whole system as I feel lighter and feel much better since using it." It aids in curing dyspepsia, indigestion, gives new life, and is guaranteed, at W. S. Dickson's drug store.

Place for the Goat.

Good many of our farms are a place for the goat. They will eat a large number of things and are very serviceable in the garden, but the goat carries the idea to a far greater extent. Sheep are grazers and browsers incidental to their goats are browsers by profession. They will live and flourish even a sheep will grow fat on food that would support the goat and make a writer on goats says that a goat will pass by cultivated land to get at burdock, mullein, thistles. The bushes constantly springing up in waste hill-sides might be made a million or so of goats distributed among our farms without in any way interfering with the stock now being raised. Costs of the Government.

At the end of every session of congress, the supporters and opponents of the party in power at the time sum up, from their own respective points of view, the results of the session. The most familiar basis of comparison of one party, or one session, with another is that of the appropriations. How much is it costing to "run the government?" If there has been a considerable increase of appropriations was it justifiable, or was it extravagance? These are questions to which contradictory answers are often given, supported, in each case, by statistical tables which are calculated to perplex those who retain faith in the absolute veracity of figures, says Youth's Companion.

The appropriations at the recent session of congress amounted, in round numbers, to 709,000,000. To arrive at the true cost of the government for the year provided for, allowance must be made for the postal revenues, which would reduce the total just given by about $100,000,000. Then before a just comparison can be made, the items of expenditure growing out of the war with Spain must be deducted. After this is done the ordinary appropriations are still about $50,000,000 more than those for the year just preceding the war.

The largest item of increase is for post office expense; and compensation for this will be found, partly in improved facilities and the extension of free rural delivery, and partly in the increased revenues which usually follow an improved service. Another large item is for the taking of the census, an expenditure which will not recur again in ten years. The increase of the navy accounts for a third item, and an increase in pensions for a fourth, while a fifth is merely a matter of book-keeping connected with the redemption of national bank notes. Altogether, these five items comprise about four-fifths of the total increase. What the items suggest of economy or extravagance must be left to the ingenuity of the campaign orators.

Endured Death's Agonies.

Only a roaring fire enabled J. M. Garretson, of San Antonio, Texas, to lie down when attacked by Asthma, from which he suffered for years. He writes his misery was often so great that it seemed he endured the agonies of death; but Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption wholly cured him. This marvelous medicine is the only known cure for Asthma as well as Consumption, Coughs and Colds, and all Throat, Chest and Lung troubles. Price 50c and $1.00. Guaranteed. Trial bottles free at W. S. Dickson's Drug Store.

An Odd Coincidence.

In one of the historical volumes of John F. Maginness is recounted a most remarkable coincidence. On the very day that the Declaration of Independence was proclaimed and old Liberty bell proclaimed the joyful news in Philadelphia a little band of Scotch-Irish settlers, without any knowledge, of course, of what was occurring elsewhere, assembled at a certain place on the banks of Pine creek, about fourteen miles above where now stands the city of Williamsport, and declared themselves free from the yoke of British rule.

Royal Family Extinct.

There is no legitimate male descendant of any kind of England sat on the throne before the reign of George I. Of the twenty-five barons who set their hands to magna charta not a single male descendant remains. There is not a single barony by writ now held by a male of the family in which it was originally created. There are only about 300 nobles or gentle families now holding the same land in male succession which their male ancestors held even so recently as the reign of King Henry VII.

NERVOUSNESS, An American Disease. Dr. S. Wain Mitchell is authority for the statement that nervousness is the characteristic malady of the American nation, and statistics show that nerve deaths number one-fourth of all deaths recorded, the mortality being mainly among young people. Johnston's Sarsaparilla QUART BOTTLE. is the grand specific for this great American disease, because it goes straight to the source of the weakness, building up health and strength by supplying rich, abundant food and pure blood to the worn-out tissues, restoring the liver to activity and regulating all the organs of the body. The young man with a lean pocketbook isn't sorry that the ice cream season is drawing to a close.
