There are probably a lot of women that will find heaven awfully old-fashioned.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years it was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly meddling with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 5 to 10 drops a day. It acts directly on the blood and cleanses the surface of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio, 203 N. Dearborn St.

"Yes, I live in Albany," replied the man with the double chin when questioned by his fellow traveler, "but I'm thinking of making a change and moving to Buffalo."

"Don't like the town, eh?" was queried.

"Why, yes, I like it well enough. Yes, Albany is a very nice town."

"Not good for your business, then?"

"Yes, I'm doing fairly well."

Nothing further was said, and then the man with the double chin seemed to think some explanation ought to follow, and he said:

"You see, a curious thing happened the other day, and after studying over it for awhile I think I have found the solution. I was called into an office where a number of citizens were gathered, and one of them made a little speech and presented me with a sponge."

"With a sponge? That was curious."

"Yes, rather, but I think I know what it means. A sponge is porous you know. It absorbs. It takes up."

"I have been absorbing and taking up wherever I could find a man to lend me a dollar or drop on a good thing. The good people of Albany have evidently got on to it, and I think I shall move."

"I may be mistaken, you know. The thing may have been intended as a compliment, and the whole town may be sorry to see me go, but somehow I take it the other way and shall pack up next week and go farther West."

The prize that is held before the Christian is well worth the greatest self-denial it may cost him. We are willing to labor and sacrifice for a little earthly glory; how foolish and unreasonable to refuse such sacrifice for the incorruptible crown, the glory that fadeth not away, but is eternal in the heavens.

The self-denial that is required of us is only the sacrifice of the most useless and harmful things in our nature, "the works of the flesh"; while we may and should indulge ourselves in the very best and most beautiful things man can possibly enjoy—"the fruits of the spirit." What a blessing to live and walk in the Spirit!

Selections.

We cannot eat and drink and do as we please. No; Paul said that he "kept under" his body, and brought it into subjection. And, if the athlete is willing to become everything for the empty glory of winning a game, should not we, like the apostles, be temperate ourselves, and help others to be temperate, for the sake of the prize that Jesus surely will give?

The will of God is a path leading straight to God. The will of man, which once ran parallel with it, is now another path, not only different from, but, in our present state, directly contrary to it; it leads from God. If, therefore, we walk in the one, we must necessarily quit the other. We cannot walk in both. We must now choose the one or the other; denying God's will to follow our own, or denying ourselves to follow the will of God.

The Lord Jesus Christ is the perfect model of self-denial, for he never refused to sacrifice mere taste or liking for the sake of spiritual good, whether of himself or others; and therein "he has left us an example, that we should follow his steps."

EPWORTH LEAGUE MEETING TOPICS.

March 10—"A Castaway." I Cor. ix., 24-27.

The passage is, undoubtedly, an allusion to the Isthmian games, which took place every three years at a spot on the seashore about nine miles from Corinth. These games were a great national institution which exercised some such influence over the Greek mind as did the Temple on the Jewish or the Triumph over the Roman. With the Greek they formed a part of the worship of beauty in the human person, and were intended to bring the human form to that idealized perfection which was seen at its height in their statues of gods and heroes. Hence, the victor in these contests was regarded as the noblest of his race, was praised as a masterpiece of humanity, and gazed at as a model of manhood. He was the pride of his family, and was honored by his city or his state as were the great generals and statesmen. The Greek race course which Paul has in mind, then, was not a mere resort for public amusement, but an almost sacred edifice under the tutelage of the patron deity of the Isthmian tribes and surrounded by the most inspiring influences and the most solemn recollections of Greek civilization. The temperance on the part of the racers to which the apostle alludes was no light matter. For ten months the candidates for a prize at these games abstained from every kind of sensual indulgence and submitted to the severest training of the body. Horace says: "Wouldst thou conquer at the games? Thou must be orderly, spare in food, abstain from confections, exercise at a fixed hour whether in heat or cold, must drink no cold water nor wine."

So Paul thinks of the Christian life as a contest for an incorruptible prize. In this race it was necessary to contend against the forces and obstacles from without, but more especially with the fleshly lusts, the temptations to ease, self-indulgence, indolence to toil and hardship, and all other things which resulted from the clamor and the craving treated his body like a slave, subjecting it to the hard and rigid discipline practiced by a boxer, lest after having preached to others he himself should become a castaway. The word refers to the double scrutiny to which the contestant in the race was subjected. He first decided whether he was worthy to enter; second, whether he had to run as to be entitled to the evergreen chaplet.

Always Willing to Oblige.

It was a Texas town, and a long-limbed Texan was making across the public square toward the courthouse with a revolver in his hand when he was stopped by a man, who asked:

"Are you on your way to the courthouse?"

"Yes, sir; I am," was the reply.

"Going to shoot anybody?"

"Yes, sir—Lawyer Johnson. If it hadn't been for him I shouldn't have lost my case yesterday. Yes, sir, going to fill him full of lead."

"Are you in any great hurry about it?"

"No special hurry, but when I have shooting on hand I like to get off my minds as soon as possible."

"Of course, but you see, Lawyer Johnson is now arguing a case for me and won't be through for forty minutes. He's going to win it for me if not interrupted, and if you will only hold on for awhile you will do me a great favor."

"Why, certainly—glad you mentioned it. No hurry about the shooting, so as it comes off today, and you can count on me. Have a drink with you? With the greatest of pleasure, and if Johnson is a particular friend of yours I'll shoot him as softly as I can and give him every show to die like a gentleman."

It Was All Arranged.

"How much for a magpie?" he asked as he stepped quietly into a hardware store.

"A magpie? My dear sir, do you take this for a bird store?" was the reply.

"Then you haven't any magpies for sale?"

"Of course not. This is a hardware store, as you will see if you cast your eyes around you."

"Yes, I see it is," said the man, after gazing around for a minute. Being it a hardware store, I suppose I could not buy a magpie here?"

"No sir; you might as well go into a drug store and ask for a ton of coal."

"I see. You keep crows, however."

"Well, I'll take one. Being as you don't keep magpies, but do keep crows, I'll take along a crowbar to kill a magpie which I'll buy somewhere else."

ALARMING MORTALITY.

Noticeable Among the Weak and Ailing.

Spring the Time Death Reaps Its Largest Harvest.

There is a Way of Eluding the Grim Destroyer.

Every Spring it is noticeable how many people are taken away that we have been accustomed to see in our daily life.

Statistics show that at no other season of the year does so many deaths occur.

Especially large is the mortality among weak and sickly people during the season of this apparent. The body that is weakened by age or disease has much to contend with during the winter months. Insufficient exercise frequently has been taken. Too much starchy and fatty foods have been eaten. The system has been allowed to become run down, and when Spring comes with its bright, sunny days, older people will begin to realize that their vitality has become very low. The same thing is true of people who are naturally sickly and weak.

Even a strong person feels at his worst. That tired, restless feeling is experienced by too many.

There need not be as many deaths this year as usually take place. A little care will ward off many Spring fatalities. If one is weak or ailing they should take time by the forelock and take Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. This great medicine has been in many cases, and will continue to be, the means by which the black angel of Death has been driven from the threshold. It dispels the grim destroyer in a scientific way, for it purifies the blood and gives strength and vitality to the nerves. It tones up and restores to a healthy condition all of the great life-giving organs of the body.

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy will enable those who take it to throw off little ills that prove dangerous only when they attack a system already wasted and weakened.

From many people, who have experienced benefit from this greatest of all life-lengtheners comes the following from the famous General Longstreet of 1217 New Hampshire avenue, Washington, D. C. He says:

"It gives me great pleasure to add my testimony with many others for Dr. Greene's Nervura, which I have used with highly beneficial results and I am able to recommend its virtues from experience. I have used it for catarrh and have derived help."

Mr. Wellington Hynes, Elizabethtown, N. Y., writes:

"I feel it my duty to tell how much good Dr. Greene's Nervura has done me. I was so run down that I could not sleep at night and everything worried me. I had no appetite, and could not work, my head ached all the time and there was an all-gone feeling in my stomach and I was always looking on the dark side of everything. I began to take Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy and in less than three weeks I felt like a new man. I can now do as much work as is expected of a man my age. I advise any one who is troubled to take Dr. Greene's Nervura. Do not go to a doctor, but get a bottle of Dr. Greene's Nervura. It is cheaper than a doctor's bill."

The latter part of Mr. Hynes' advice might be profitably disregarded, however, if you should feel you would like the advice of a physician. You can have such advice and have it free. If you will write or call on the great Dr. Greene, blood and nerve specialist, Dr. Greene, 35 W. 14th St., New York City.
