

OH! FOR STRENGTH!

Weak Nerves, Tired, Exhausted Bodies.

The Complaint of Thousands upon Thousands.

Health and Strength are Within Your Grasp.

Dr. Greene's Nervura Makes You Strong and Well.

Oh, those nerves of ours, how they do bother us! Weak, tired, and nervous is the complaint everywhere. We overwork, dissipate, weaken our bodies, ruin our health, and finally break down. Sleeplessness and indigestion are early symptoms, for the nerves are too exhausted and irritable to permit rest, and the stomach too weak to digest food.

It is nerve and brain exhaustion which makes the brain tired, and the arm nerveless, the limbs trembling, the muscles weak, and the whole body without strength, energy or ambition. It is loss of nerve and vital power which is slowly but surely sapping the very life itself, and unless help is sought from the right source, the end will be shattered nerves, insanity with softening of the brain, nervous prostration, heart failure, paralysis or premature death.

Beware of such symptoms! A well known druggist, Charles W. Eggleston, 329 Park Avenue, Worcester, Mass., suffered from nervous prostration and all its terrible symptoms. He writes the following letter telling what he knows is the best way to get well.

"Some time ago I was taken with nervous prostration, I suffered terribly with my nerves and could get no sleep at all. I became fearfully exhausted, my stomach was in terrible condition from dyspepsia, and I could eat hardly anything.

"I used several medicines but without benefit. Being in the drug business myself, and having had many customers speak in the highest terms of Dr. Greene's Nervura, blood and nerve remedy, I determined to try it. After taking only one-half bottle I began to feel much better.

"I slept soundly at night, and my appetite was splendid. After taking three bottles, I ate three square meals a day, and had not the slightest distress. My nerves were perfectly strong and I felt like a new man, being completely cured of all my troubles.

"Out of the respect I bear the manufacturer of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and my desire to have the sick and suffering made well and strong, I unhesitatingly say that this medicine is the best and most wonderful remedy known today.

"It does just what is said of it, it cures disease. Don't hesitate to use it, sufferers, for you will never regret it. You will be made well and strong."

As this letter is from a dealer in medicine, his word is authority on such matters. Everybody knows that Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is the great leading medicine of the age. Take it and you will be made strong, healthy and vigorous. Doctors recommend it because it is the prescription of a physician, and because they know it cures.

Dr. Greene, the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, discovered it. He can be consulted free, personally or by letter, at his office, 35 W. 14th St., New York City.

GOOD INFLUENCES.

Dr. Talmage Talks About the Mission of the "Writer's Inkhorn."

How It Makes For the World's Betterment

"The Inkstand of the World's Evangelization."

(Copyright 1901.)

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In a new way and from a peculiar text Dr. Talmage discourses of good influences brought to the world by the improvement of the text in Ezekiel ix, 2. "And one man among them was clothed with linen, with a writer's inkhorn by his side."

The poem from which my text is taken is epic, lyric, dramatic, weird and overpowering. It is more than Homeric or Dantesque. No one ever had such divine dreams as Ezekiel. In a vision this prophet had seen wrathful angels, destroying angels, each with a sword, but in my text he sees a man with a writer's inkhorn. The receptacle for the ink in olden time was made out of the horn of a cow or a ram or a roebuck, as now it is made out of metal or glass, and the liquid was called the inkhorn, as now we say inkstand. We have all spoken of the power of the sword, of the power of wealth, of the power of office, of the power of social influence, but to-day I speak of the power for good or evil in the inkstand. It is upon your tables, holding a black or blue or red liquid. It is a fortress, an armory, a gateway, a ransom or a demolition. "You mistake," says one. "It is the pen that has the power. No, my friend. What is the influence of a dry pen? Pass it up and down a sheet of paper, and it leaves no mark. It expresses no opinion. It gives no warning. It spreads no intelligence. It is the liquid which the pen dips out of the inkstand that does the work. Here and there a celebrated pen, with which a Declaration of Independence or a Magna Charta or a treaty was written, has been kept in literary museum or national archives, but for the most part the pens, whether of gold or made out of reed, or of later wing of bird or still later of metallic substance, have disappeared, while the liquid which the pens took from the inkstand remains in the inkstand. If put together, would be large enough to envelop the round world. For practical, for moral, for religious, for eternal purposes, I speak of the mission of "the writer's inkhorn."

First, I mention that which is purely domestic. The inkstand is in every household. It avails itself of every opportunity to express affection or condolence or advice. Father uses it; mother uses it; the sons and daughters use it. It tells the home news; it announces the coming of the birth, the departure, the accident, the last sickness, the death. That home inkstand what a mission it has already executed, and what other missions it may yet fulfill! May it stand off from all insincerity and all querulousness. Let it tell only that which it would be well to read after the manner that wrote it, and the hand that received it can write no more. Dip out of that inkstand only that which is paternal, maternal, filial, sisterly, brotherly. Sacred let it be, not to what is called the "household gods," but to the one and only God who "setteth the solitary in families." Dip out of it solace for parents on the descending side of years, and encouragement for those who are climbing the steep.

The carvers and glass blowers are ever busy making more ornate and skillful bowls for the ink, but not one of them will be so sacred as the old fashioned inkstand out of which was dipped the liquid for the making of the family record. The leaves in the Bible between the Old and the New Testaments, not so many leaves, now blank as before recent years made birthday or mortuary insertions. From that home inkstand the child dips out material for those large and awkward letters that one always makes when learning to write, and from it are taken the treasured letters that show the wrinkled hand is gradually forgetting its cunning.

Oh, you recent years set homes of your own, out of the new home inkstand write often to the old folks, if they be still living. A letter means more to them than to you, and it means the activities of life and to whom mental correspondence is more than we can manage. They await the coming of the letter. Undertake no great thing without their advice. Old people for counsel, young people for action. Even though without dependence they may be incompetent to give valuable opinions, their counsel, their compliment them by asking their counsel. It will do them good; it will make their last days exhilarating. Make that home inkstand a source of joy and consolation to those who are near the terminus of the earthly journey. Domestic correspondence is not attended to at once. The newspaper, joining with the telegraph, has the tidings of all the neighborhood, but swiftest revolving wheel of modern printing press and quickest flash along the electric wires can never do the system of kindness which the home inkstand. As the merciful angel of my text appeared before the brazen altar with the inkhorn at his side in Ezekiel's vision, so let the angel of kindness appear at the altars of the old homestead.

Furthermore, the inkstand of the business man has its mission. Between now and the hour of your next coming to a real man, O professional men, there will not be a day when you cannot dip from the inkhorn a message that will influence temporal and eternal destinies. Let the rash young man running into wild speculation, and with as much ink as you can put on the pen at one time you may save him from the Niagara and the ruin of his life. On the next street there is a young man started in business who through lack of patronage or mistake in purchase of goods or want of adaptation to the market of collapse. One line of ink from your pen will save him from being an underling all his life and start him on a career that will win him a fortune which will enable him to become an endower of libraries, an opener of art galleries and builder of churches.

The most largely successful and useful men of our time were an old codger because they could not afford a new one, and got wages less than that which they pay their cook or butler. It will be a mighty thing if out of your inkstand you can dip a man's earthly and everlasting fortune. Dip out of the inkstand not one word of disheartenment. People have enough burdens to carry without your adding one ounce to the list. From your inkstand put not one blot on an honest ambition. Keep all the whole of your factory spinning rays of sunshine. If you are a Christian man, put into your business letters an devout, moral, religious suggestion that will keep the receiver thinking after he has left the counting room for his home and far into the night when he lies upon a bed. To-morrow morning at 11 o'clock, as you begin to answer your letters, you will have on the nib of your pen enough ink to save a soul from death and hide a multitude of sins.

Furthermore, great are the responsibilities of the author's inkhorn. All the people, or nearly all the people, read, and that which they read does their souls. He immortal, their prosperity or failure, their faith or their unbelief, their purity or corruption, their heaven or hell. Show me any man's library, great or small, and I will examine the books, finding those with leaves uncut, but displayed for sake of the peruser, and without having the man or knowing his name. I will tell you his likes and his dislikes, his morals, good or bad, or indifferent, his qualifications for business or artistic or professional or mechanical life. The best index to any man's character is the book he prefers above all others. Oh, the power of a book for good or evil!

Abraham Lincoln in early life read Paine's "Age of Reason," and it so influenced him that he wrote an essay against Christianity. But afterward some Christian books came into his hands and gloriously changed his mind and made him a most ardent friend of the Bible and a man of prayer. A letter in Mr. Lincoln's own handwriting is in my book, the letter in response to some resolutions passed by a Methodist conference, saying: "In response to your address allow me to attest the accuracy of its historical statements, and I endorse the sentiments it expresses and thank you in the nation's name for the sure promise it gives. Nobly sustained as the Government has been by all the churches, I would utter nothing which might in the least appear injurious against any. Yet without this it may fairly be said that the Methodist Episcopal Church, not less devoted than the best, is by its gross numbers the most important of all. It is no fault in others that the Methodist church sends more soldiers to the field, more nurses to the hospital and more prayers heaver than any. God bless the Methodist church, bless all the churches, and blessed be God, who in this, our great trial, gives us the churches.

What a great thing it was that the Christian books which Mr. Lincoln read obliterated from his mind the infidel literature! William Carey, became a missionary by reading "The Voyages of Captain Cook." John Wesley's life was changed by reading Jeremy Taylor's "Holy Living and Dying." These are books in your library or lying on your parlor table or secreted in some place by your child that will make for two worlds, this and the next, the character of its reader.

When a bad book is printed, you do well to blame the publisher, but most of all blame the author. The malarial rose from his inkstand; the poison that caused the moral or spiritual death dropped in the fluid from the tin of his pen. The manufacture of that ink could tell you that it is made of tannin and salt of iron and nut galls and green vitriol, but many an author has dipped from his inkstand hyper-criticism and malice and slanders and calumnies, as from a fountain of death.

Among the most important are the editorial and reporter's inkstand. The thick ink on the printer's roller is different from the ink into which the writer dips his pen and is compounded of linseed oil and lampblack, and made black by boiling or burning. But the editorial and reporter's pens are responsible for that which the printer's ink roller impresses upon the paper sheets. Where upon man reads a book, 5000 men read a newspaper. What change of opinion in regard to the printing press since the day when the first paper was printed? The printer cannot be so sorry that such a pernicious machine is erected among them, and when under the reign of Charles II., only one newspaper, the London Gazette, was allowed to be printed, and that only on Mondays and Thursdays! Not until the judgment day, when the forces which have influenced the world will be compared, and announced, will be known the power of the modern newspaper.

Thenceforth I dipped into it and brought up "The Gospel in Ezekiel." John Cumming dipped into it and brought up "The Apocalypse." Oh, the opulence of the literature of the night, the mighty streams of evangelistic power that have poured from the writer's inkhorn that have appeared in Ezekiel's vision!

Oh, you recent years the distinguished ones who have dipped into the inkstand of the world's evangelization do not forget that there are hundreds of thousands of unknown men and women who are engaged in inconspicuous ways doing the same thing. How many anxious mothers writing to the boys in town! How many men writing encouragement to brothers far away! How many invalids bolstered up in bed, the inkhorn on the stand at their side, writing letters of condolence to the sick or the sorrowing. They are flying all the time kind words, gospel words, helpful words, saving words. Call the evangelistic inkhorn into service in the early morning when you feel well, and you are grateful for the progress during your sleeping hours, and write before you retire at close of day to those who are ill, and long with you, "I will be to God it were morning!" How many bruised and disappointed and wronged souls of earth would be glad to get a letter from you! Stir up that consolatory inkhorn.

All Christendom has been waiting for great revivals of religion to start from the pulpit and prayer meetings. I now suggest that great revivals of religion may start from a concerted and organized movement through the inkhorns of all Christendom, each writer dipping from the inkhorn a general invitation, a gospel invitation, a gospel word, a gospel warning, a gospel instruction. The ink is all there, a hundred thousand tables, and besides it is all there, a hundred thousand pens to dip it out. Why not through such process have millions of souls brought to God in the summer? By letter you could make the invitation more effective than by word of mouth. The invitation from your lips may be argued back, may be questioned, may be answered with a joke, but a good written gospel letter, written in prayer, and started with prayer, and followed by prayer, will be read over and over again, and cannot be answered in a frivolous way.

Within arm's reach of where you sit there may be a fluid that you may put on the nib of your pen, and you may write (or the swift flying angel of my text, Ezekiel saw in vision "with a writer's inkhorn by his side.")

There were destroying angels, and each had what the Bible calls a "slaughter weapon" in his hand. It was a lance or a hat-cane never do the system of kindness which the home inkstand. As the merciful angel of my text appeared before the brazen altar with the inkhorn at his side in Ezekiel's vision, so let the angel of kindness appear at the altars of the old homestead.

As Dr. Raleigh declared that when thirty-six miles at sea off the coast of New England the cattle on board the ship were all dead, and the crew were all on the verge of starvation, and the ship was on the verge of the world's controversy in the redoubt of the white lilies of universality.

If our Bible is true—and no other book that was ever printed and as true as that book, which Moses began and John finished when the time was when all the weapons of cruelty were arrayed against the millions of evangelization will have their way. In the museums of the world there are pictures of the cannon and the bomb which were kept as curiosities, and children will be incredulous as parents tell them that civilized nations once employed such instruments of death, and more incredulous when told by their parents that the army that killed the most men was considered the most glorious army. The red horse of carnage that is now in the museum of the black horse of famine, and the white horse of death will be stable, and the white horse of prosperity and peace, mounted on the neck of King, will lead the great army with banners. Through the convincing, converting, sanctifying power of the Eternal Spirit may we all march in that procession. Hail to the Mighty Rider of the white horse in the final triumph! Sweep down and sweep by, thou Angel of the New Covenant, with the inkhorn of the world's evangelization. "The mountains and the hills shall break forth into singing, and all the trees of the field shall clap their hands. In the day of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the briar shall come up the myrtle tree, and it shall be to the Lord for a name, for an everlasting sign that shall not be cut off."

Launching Big Battleships. It costs from $4,000 to $5,000 to launch a battleship—for the launching only. One of Cramp's men says: "The building of the ways for the ship to slide down over is the main item, and then comes the greasing. Every inch of timber over which the vessel slides must be covered with a lubricant. Soap and tallow form the main ingredients. We use a layer of beef tallow and a layer of soft soap. Between one and one and a half tons of the stuff is required to move the average battleship. The tallow is spread on first, to the depth of about three fingers, and the workmen use big, flat trowels to make the surface as smooth as possible. Then they pour over the soft soap, which is just thick enough to run, or about the consistency of tar. The double coating answers admirably, and the ship slides into the water as if it were sailing on air. If it sticks, it is likely to spring some of the vessel's plates, and accidents of that kind are so costly that nothing is spared to avert them."

THE DUTY OF MOTHERS.

What suffering frequently results from a mother's ignorance, or more frequently from a mother's neglect to properly instruct her daughter!

Tradition says "woman must suffer," and young women are so taught. There is a little truth and a great deal of exaggeration in this. If a young woman suffers severely she needs treatment, and her mother should see that she gets it.

Many mothers hesitate to take their daughters to a physician for examination; but no mother need hesitate to write freely about her daughter or herself to Mrs. Pinkham and secure the most efficient advice without charge. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass.

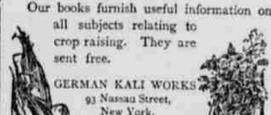

Mrs. August Pfalzgraf, of South Byron, Wis., mother of the young lady whose portrait we here publish, writes Mrs. Pinkham in January, 1899, saying her daughter had suffered for two years with irregular menstruation—had headache all the time, and pain in her side, feet swell, and was generally miserable. Mrs. Pinkham promptly replied with advice, and under date of March, 1899, the mother writes again that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured her daughter of all pains and irregularity.

Nothing in the world equals Mrs. Pinkham's great medicine for regulating woman's peculiar monthly troubles.
