

FOR THE LITTLE ONES.

How Two Chicago Boys Have Started a Mushroom Farm.

Two Chicago boys, brothers, living on the South Side, at 6618 Ellis avenue, have become farmers. Their farm is in the basement of the four story flat building in which they live, and the only crop they raise is mushrooms.

CONDENSED STORIES.

General Lee's Story of His First Meeting With Funston.

General Fitz-Hugh Lee tells this story of his first meeting with General Funston:

"I remember Funston well. One morning when I was consul general in Havana a hungry, hunted looking chap appeared in my office. He said his name was Funston and that he had been fighting with the insurgents for a year and a half and that he was sick and wounded. He had a Mauser bullet through his lungs, his lip was broken and his constitution shattered by fever.

"I became interested in him and admired his grit. I knew that if the Spaniards learned who he was they would arrest him and would take him to Moro Castle, where he would be placed against a wall and a volley of musketry would end him. So I bought him a ticket to New York, and also fitted him out with some clothing. I offered to have some clothing made for him, as the only ready made suits to be had were of light weight, but he did not dare to remain.

"When Funston arrived in New York on Jan. 15, 1898, a blizzard was howling through the streets, and he must have shivered as he limped down the gangplank. After his return to Kansas war talk was in the air. He was appointed colonel of a regiment—and you know the rest."

J. L. Toole and the Prince.

King Edward has always had a keen delight in entertainments of all kinds. Mr. Toole, who entered on his seventy-second year a few days ago, will remember his first visit to Sandringham. His manager went down before him to make the necessary arrangements, and the king, then Prince of Wales, explained that he wished the performance to be kept secret in order that the princess might be surprised. "To enable you to do so," said the heir apparent, "I shall introduce you as the Spanish ambassador." "But I cannot speak a word of Spanish," said Mr. Toole's manager. "Nor can they," replied the Prince of Wales, "so that your disguise will be perfect." After the performance the prince proposed Mr. Toole's health in a genial and kindly speech.

The Hanging of Mr. Goodwin.

N. C. Goodwin tells this story on himself: "Charles H. Hoyt met a friend on the street in Boston on the day 'Nathan Hale' was open in that city. 'I have a couple of tickets for 'Nathan Hale' tonight,' said he. 'Come along. It's a good play—a good revolutionary plot, New England surroundings and all that. It will interest you.' 'No,' answered the person invited. 'I don't like Goodwin, and I won't go.' 'But come and see the play.' 'No, I don't like Goodwin on the stage or off.' 'Oh, this is just the play for you to see him in,' said Hoyt earnestly. 'He gets hanged in the last act.'"

An Everts Witticism.

The late William M. Everts fogged light blades of wit and humor as successfully as he did the weightier weapons of analytical argument and sustained eloquence. In his New York Mail and Express. In his prime no public dinner was regarded as complete without him. Where he sat was the head of the table. It would take a sizable volume to hold all the good things which fell from Mr. Everts' lips or were credited to him. His sly dig at President Hayes' temperance principles is still one of the favorite stories at Washington. "While Hayes occupied the White House," said Everts, "the water at his dinner flowed like champagne."

Sterilized Money.

Owing to the existence of a scarlet fever epidemic in Keene, N. H., the local bank now sterilizes all the money which passes through its hands. The notes and coins are placed in a galvanized iron oven lined with asbestos and heated by means of a Bunsen burner. A thermometer is provided to show the interior temperature at all times. The oven is heated to 300 degrees when

The Power of GOOD in Merchandise.

A man's good deeds will find him out as well as his sins. Two months ago, we opened this Store and announced to the public that we meant DEATH TO HIGH PRICES, and a general upheaval in the old methods of Merchandising, to the great advantage of the community. The people took us at our word: they came and saw, and were convinced that we were doing just what we said, and what we proclaimed in our policy at the outset. Since then no whips have been required to get the people into STEIGERS' old stand on North Main Street, next to McAfee's hotel. They have come daily in a great throng of their own free will, all of which goes to show and prove the old, old story that there is nothing so sure of being found out.

A GENUINE BARGAIN

Strike a bargain up a dark alley, bury it as you will, and the warring instinct will discover it. It takes a peach twig to locate a well of water, but a blind man will find a bargain; and so it goes at the old STEIGER Stand, it is the power of

Mighty and Unnumbered

Bargains that has brought the people from far and near. There is no sentiment about it—all business, pure business. If it were a matter of sentiment, people would pass this store; for we consider that other merchants may be more attractive personally, but when it comes to bargains, the real magnet, the real trade winner, we are ahead of the procession; money refunded if goods are not as represented.

Two months of phenomenal success set the compass for the future: it points to the pole of success; it means that we are here to stay; it means that people are going to have these unequalled bargains the whole year 'round—year in and year out.

We, therefore, pause at the threshold of the third month to return heartfelt thanks to the public for that kindness and appreciation that has made it possible for us to successfully launch this enterprise, and send it forward to a continuous mission of good will, joy and thrift for the many homes of our beautiful city and country side.

The Flow From Ireland. Ireland lost by emigration last year 45,288 souls, an increase over 1899 of 3,347. Over 82 per cent of those were between the ages of 15 and 35.

Of the total number of emigrants 37,765 came to the United States. Great Britain received 6,050, New Zealand 44, Canada 472 and Australia 834.

A Whopper. In a letter received here from Herman Koehler, formerly in the bakery business in this city and now a resident of Dawson City, he tells of the killing of a mastodon in Alaska.

Mr. Koehler says: "Up on the forks a big mastodon was killed after he had demolished a hotel, several houses, tossed dogs and horses into the air and caused men to run for their lives. He was at last killed by an electric wire which he tried to pull down. His skin alone weighed 1,100 pounds. The skeleton, which is 15 feet high, is now on exhibition. One tusk weighed 217 pounds. The town in which he was killed looked as if it had been visited by an earthquake."
