Made Ill By Dancing.

Miss Nora Cooley, aged 19, of Hampden, Baltimore, was stricken with heart failure at Charleston, as a result of exertion in dancing, and was unconscious for 12 hours.

Their Secret is Out.

All Sadville, Ky., was curious to learn the cause of the vast improvement in the health of Mrs. S. P. Whitaker, who had for a long time, endured untold suffering from a chronic bronchial trouble.

How to Hang a Hammock.

Tonoloway Baptist Church.

John Montgomery, John W. Powell, John Fisher, Daniel Peck, Ephraim Covatt, Jonathan Clevenger and N. L. Evans. All are dead except the last named.

The church obtained a formal separation from the Philadelphia Association and joined the Baltimore, and in 1843 joined the Janata, but has not met with any Association for several years.

Several members went to Indiana in 1845. A request from them for the Articles of Faith, Rules of Decorum, &c., was laid before the church and granted.

At a special meeting in 1804 the roll was called, and sixty-four members answered. I suggest we have a roll-call on Saturday before third Sunday in May.

I find that several of the members were licensed to preach, some of whom developed into good, useful preachers, while others failed to manifest any gift of usefulness to the church.

A cautious engineer, while surveying and locating a line, will occasionally take a back sight through the compass, and now, having looked back over the history of this church, let us try to imitate her in her love, zeal, patience, endurance, unselfishness, devotion, humility, firmness, gentleness, liberality, and so many things we see that is commendable.

This article is addressed to the members of Tonoloway church in particular (most of whom are readers of Zion's Advocate, and all ought to be), and to our people generally.

How John Fell from Grace.

Chinese servant stories are epidemic. Here's one, and it's true. A West side woman a few days ago was boasting to a caller of the virtues of her Mongolian cook, and she emphasized the latter's systematic methods as his strong point.

"John finishes his work at precisely the same minute every evening," said she proudly. "I always know exactly where he is and what he is doing at any time of the day."

"Well, what is he doing now?" was asked. "Let me see. It is 7 o'clock. Well, he has just finished putting the dishes away, and at this moment is sweeping the kitchen. Come, let's go out and see if I'm not right."

They started through the dining room, and found everything in its place, as prophesied. In the pantry the dishes were neatly arranged in their customary place. Then they opened the kitchen door.

There in the centre of the room was John, and he was—complacently washing his feet in the dish-pan!

The embarrassed mistress and her convulsed guest retired in haste. And the servant problem was dropped.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Editor S. A. Brown, of Bennettsville, S. C., was once immensely surprised. "Through long suffering from Dyspepsia," he writes, "my wife was greatly run down. She had no strength or vigor and suffered great distress from her stomach, but she tried Electric Bitters which helped her at once, and after using four bottles, she is entirely well, can eat anything. It's a grand tonic, and its gentle laxative qualities are splendid for torpid liver."

Two in a bed is the usual custom of sleeping, in the United States at least, and also in Canada and England. But in Germany and France single beds are the rule.

Single beds involve more linen, more work making beds and more washing, but I never knew a family to return to the old plan after once giving single beds a fair trial. Especially in summer is the single bed to be preferred, or even sleeping on the floor, to two in a bed.

"Have you carefully considered all that I have said, my boy?" asked the old gentleman the day after he had given his son a little fatherly advice.

Pickpocket's Quick Work.

Writers of fiction, no matter how sensational, are obliged to avoid working into their stories any situation that appears improbable. Writers of facts are not thus handicapped. The following is a narration of an occurrence that, wonderful and improbable as it may seem, never the less happened in this city.

One of the large pawnbrokerage houses engages an expert accountant to go over its books once a month. This accountant, who lives in Brooklyn, went to the pawnbroker's office direct from his home recently to go over the concern's books.

"What's the matter?" he asked. "Why, that fellow, who just rushed out so wildly brought this watch and wanted $10 on it. He said he had bought it for $40. It is a $250 watch, so I thought he had stolen it, and I told him to wait a minute and I would call up the police and find out where he had got it for that money. You saw how he waited." And he laughed again.

The watch was a gold repeater and stop watch. So soon as the accountant cast his eyes on the timepiece he put his hand in his pocket where he usually carries his watch. It was empty. "That's my watch," he said, and opening the case of the back of the watch he showed an inscription which his father had engraved there when he presented it to him. The thief had stolen it from him while he was in the car, and had reached the pawnbroker's only a few minutes before, and before he himself had discovered his loss.—New York Tribune.

As Regards a Wife.

"I'll try not to, father." "No butterflies of fashion, my boy, but a girl of some solid worth; one who has some practical accomplishments."

"I have resolved, father, to seek such a wife as you describe," said the young man, with determination. "I see the folly of seeking a wife in society. I will go to an intelligence office this afternoon and see if I can find one that will answer. And then I'll have mother call on her, and—"

"Young man, I'll break your neck in about a minute!" "But you said—" "Never mind what I said. I've changed my mind."—Leslie's Weekly.

Best Lawyer in Town.

Jim Webster was being tried for bribing a colored witness, Sam Johnson, to testify falsely. "You say the defendant offered you $50 to testify in his behalf?" asked the lawyer of Sam.

"No, sah, he didn't say nuffin' 'bout you payin' me $50. Your name wasn't mentioned, 'cep'in' he told me if eber I got inter a scrape you was de best lawyer in San Antonio to fool de 'judge an' de jury—in fac', you was de best in town to cover up raskality."

That all things come to those who go after them. That a finger in the pie is worth two out of joint. That people who live in glass houses shouldn't turn up the lights. That fruits of a man's industry are seldom to be found on his family tree.

That hope is the joyous expectation of being able to dodge our just deserts. That every woman who marries feels that to a certain degree she is a reformer. That it's pretty hard to improve on nature, but a man has succeeded in making his ice cooler.

That a fool may speak in five languages, but it takes a wise man to remain silent in one. That the man who imagines he never did a foolish act isn't wise enough to know what folly is. That it's peculiar the swifter a man is in this life the harder it is for him to get ahead of his running expenses.

That some people are very high in the scale of society simply because they are too light to bring the scale down. See? That a brave man complains of the dinner to his wife's face; a bold man goes into the kitchen and complains of it to the cook.

P. T. Thomas, Sumterville, Ala., "I was suffering from dyspepsia when I commenced taking Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. I took several bottles and can digest anything." Kodol Dyspepsia Cure is the only preparation containing all the natural digestive fluids. It gives weak stomachs entire rest, restoring their natural condition. Trout's drug store.
