Made Maud Mad.

Maud Muller on a summer day Raked the meadow sweet with hay

Her hat was off, her arms were bare, She muttered low; "Wish I could Heinbaugh. swear !!

But Maudie's mood was far from sweet.

Because of the terrific heat.

She knew that every sunbeam's chase Brought a new freckle to her face, And while she raked the hay field through, Her neck burned red-her nose did, too.

The Judge came riding down the road, And stopped where Maudie's fair head glowed,

He wore a suit of snowy white, And was, in truth, a most cool sight.

He leaped from off his old brown mare And sought to chat with Maudie there He asked a drink of water clear,

And, as he drank, sighed : "Wish "tiwas been."

Then chucked Miss Muller 'neath the chin

And gave her quite a goo goo grin, And smirked and smiled and asked her:

HDo. You find it hot enough for you?',

Then Maudio grasped her ancient rake, And shricked aloud: "For goodness sake !

"It's hard enough to rake this hay, But harder when tools come this way!"

She swiped the Judge across the hat And got him twice ere down he sat. She biffed his ear in manner neat

Three times before he found his feet. She chased him through the meadow ground Unmoved by his appeals profound. As he across the stubble pawed

He yelped : "I'm sorry! Please stop, Maud !" But there was murder in her heart,

'Twas well for him he had a start. She seized him with clutch intense And hurled him through a barb wire fence.

And never missed a stroke or strike Till he was headed down the pike, And as he vanished in a cloud Of dust, her attitude was proud.

light, And cried, as he went from her sight "The warmest words of tongue or pen Ars these : 'Don't you come back again !'''
