Coming Home Once More.

When the heated breath of summer Fanned our brows with fevered heat, And the very flowers at noontide Drooped in fragrance faint and sweet, Then we dropped the heavy burdens, Known to every heart that lives, And for just a little season Sought the rest that nature gives

On the breezy mountain summit, In the pine tree's healing shade, By the softly flowing river, Or the cool and quiet glade, We have heard the silent voices Whisper benedictions sweet, While the tired body reveled In a rest and peace complete.

Where the restless waves are singing Through the surges soft and low, We have seemed to catch the music Of the songs we used to know. And the strength and joy of childhood Seemed to thrill the livelong day, As among the breakers dashing, We have battled with the spray,

Oh, the hidden balm of nature For the tired heart and brain! It revives the wearied body, Soothes and silences our pain. But from mountain-top and meado From the charm of ocean shore, With their memory fresh upon us, We are coming home once more.

For the days of rest are over. There is earnest work to do. We shall need the insuiration. And the strength and courage no May the odor of the pine tree, And the glory of the shore, Fill and thrill the days before us, For we're coming home once mor

A Wonderful Lens.

Some years ago the writer paid a visit to Alvah Clark, at Cambridgeport, to witness the testing of the huge lens for the famous Lick telescope. At the end of set up on edge. The calf should be gently handled from the start. The future disposition of the cow depends upon her treatment when young. To make a gentle milker the calf should never receive a blow or a harsh word, in order that it may have confidence in the attendants, and it will not thereafter be nervous. It should be rubbed, brushed, petted and fed from the hand and the teats and udder frequently handled. It is easier to break in a calf than to worry with a vicious cow.
