

ALL OVER THE HOUSE.

Every Woman May Have an Indoor Bulb Garden. Every woman should be her own florist. Then instead of being at the mercy of the professionals, who in midwinter and spring are able to command exorbitant prices for their choicest blooms, the thrifty housewife who has exercised a little forethought may fairly revel in blossoms that cost her nothing at all.

Problems For the Housewife. Here are the problems that confront every conscientious housewife. Every woman who takes upon herself the responsibility of making a home must solve them and all their ramifications one way or another. Surely the housewife has important issues enough in her hands without seeking a field for others.

First and foremost come the buying, cooking and serving of something to eat.

Second, the problem of cleanliness.

Third, the servant problem.

Fourth, the comfortable and artistic furnishing of the house and making it a pleasant place to stay.

Fifth, the intellectual life of the home, for the attainment of which all other factors become worth while.

Without this last crowning glory kept constantly as the chief aim housekeeping becomes the worst form of drudgery.

The Right Way to Bake Potatoes. Wash and clean the skins of the potatoes without breaking. Put them on the grate in a moderately heated oven.

Live and Croutons. A delicious breakfast dish is calf's liver hashed and served with croutons.

Smell by the Yard. The method of measuring smell adopted by M. Berthelot opens a wide field for investigation.

The Troublesome Crack. Every one knows how exasperating the crack of an opened door may be, but not every one knows how readily it may be recovered so as to permit the occupant of the room to sit behind it secure from observation.

To Take Off Wax Candle Grease. Have an iron made very hot; put a piece of clean blotting paper over the grease spot and hold the iron close to it, but do not let it touch the paper.

Mexico's Navy. Mexico has the smallest navy in the world in proportion to her population.

AN IMPROMPTU CHEER.

Cecil Rhodes was greatly amused some time ago when he was coming home from the Cape on a Castle liner. While passing Cherboung several vessels of the French channel squadron were drawn up in line to salute the ex-Empress Eugenie's yacht.

The Castle liner's captain, wishing to show his respect to the empress, got his men ready to salute, but in the short time at his disposal he could not school his crew to repeat the French words.

A Query and Answer. Quite a long letter has come to us from a subscriber in Brookline, Mass. Perhaps it will be sufficient if we simply publish the final paragraph:

"Do you ever realize that the emanations of human thought are never isolated and abstracted so that they stand without the universal consciousness, but that instead they form one endless continuity where by through all the phases of literature, whether primitive or whether typical of high aesthetic cultivation, they are united by what is perhaps a subconscious but nevertheless an inherent and persistent striving after the complete and perfect expression of what is best in the human heart and intellect?"

Yes, sometimes. By the way, in a couple of weeks it will be about time for buckwheat cakes.—Bookman.

An Unfortunate Example. King Victor Emmanuel, in spite of his courteous manners, is gifted with a quick wit and a sarcastic tongue at times.

Home For All Soldiers. A remarkable soldiers' home will be that now building at Johnson City, Tenn., where both Union and Confederate soldiers in the civil war and volunteers in the war with Spain are to be harbored.

There is a newspaper in Kansas whose motto is "Lie, steal, drink and swear," and it is thus explained by the editor: When you lie, let it be down to pleasant dreams; when you steal, let it be away, from immoral associates; when you drink, let it be pure water; when you swear, let it be that you will not once but ever, patronize your home paper, pay your subscription, and not send your job work away from home.

Prince Henry did a graceful and popular act in placing a wreath on the monument of Abraham Lincoln at Chicago. He had previously expressed his regret at being unable to visit the tomb of the great emancipator at Springfield.

The Real Thing.

A man in a buggy stopped his horse beside a crowd of men in a remote corner of the Dayton fair grounds last fall, and beckoned them to approach.

"Gentlemen," he said in a subdued tone as the crowd gathered about the buggy, "I have some cold tea here put up in pints. It's good stuff, and I am selling it a dollar a pint. I have to be mighty careful. If you want it you'll have to be quick, slip it in your pockets and get away as soon as possible, for I am being watched.

He pulled up the oil cloth cover on the rear of his vehicle and displayed a box filled with pints. In about three minutes it was all gone, and he drove off with a pocket full of silver.

A moment later one of the young men who had been of the crowd that surrounded the buggy took a friend back of a photographer's tent, drew a bottle from his inside pocket and told him to have a drink.

"That isn't whiskey!"

"What!" exclaimed the other, "not whiskey? What in the blazes is it then?"

"It tastes like ordinary tea."

"Well darn that measly faking! He said it was 'cold tea,' and I'll be Joe dogged if it ain't!"

And he started out to look for the offender with blood in his eye. But he didn't find him.—Punxsutawney Spirit.

Hyndman.

March 12.—There was quite a flood here last Friday. The water raised and run into the tannery till the men were compelled to leave. The high waters took the county bridge and took the P. R. bridge, and took part of the B. O. till the trains were stopped.

The Dwarving of Trees.

The dwarf trees of Japan have been a never ending source of wonder to Europeans ever since the opening of the hermit kingdom to inspection by the best of the world.

Take an orange and scoop out the pulp. Fill the interior with a rich mold and plant an acorn in the centre of it, leave the hole in the rind of it to sprout through.

Soon after the first shoot has appeared the roots begin to break through the orange skin. Take a sharp knife and shave these off carefully and keep them shaved.

The Japanese dwarf all kinds of trees and make them live to a great age. Some of these dwarfs, like the Chabo Hida are well known and their owners have documentary evidence attesting their great age.

Remedy Worse Than Disease.

From Portland, Oregon, comes the information that steps are being taken to procure a number of woodpeckers and yellow-hammers for introduction into the Hawaiian islands, which appeared to be suffering from the ravages of wood-borers.

The Hawaiians are making a sad mistake in undertaking to import pest-destroyers. One would think they would be better satisfied to suffer the pests that nature has given them, after their investigation and experiences with remedies a few years ago.

It would seem that nature will not tolerate interference, and it has come home forcibly to those who have interfered that invariably the remedy is worse than the disease when trying exterminate pests.

Not long ago, according to the New York Commercial, the West Indies suffered much from rats in the cane brakes, and the planters there introduced the mongoose.

Very soon rats and reptiles disappeared, and the mongoose made himself and family thoroughly at home. Then the poultry yard got thinned out, and eventually in despair the Texas tick was introduced to kill the mongoose.

This failed, and the tick has also come to stay, preferring cow flesh to the mongoose, which resulted in Texan fever among the cattle.

In this country the English sparrow was introduced to destroy insects that were injuring vegetation in some sections. They killed and devoured the insects, but have taken possession of the land and are a greater pest than the insects ever were or could become.

And so pests increase instead of diminish by interfering with nature. People had better suffer the ills they have than fly to those they know not of. The Hawaiians would be wise to think the matter over before introducing remedies for pests.—State Register.

The spring sales are now in full blast throughout the country and regulars are looking for big free dinners.
