Wants To Help Others.

"I had stomach trouble all my life," says Edw. Mehler, proprietor of the Union Bottling Works, Erie, Pa., "and tried all kinds of remedies, went to several doctors and spent considerable money trying to get a moment's peace. Finally I read of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure and have been taking it to my great satisfaction. I never found its equal for stomach trouble and gladly recommend it in hope that I may help other sufferers." Kodol Dyspepsia Cure cures all stomach troubles. You don't have to diet. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat.

Mr. Welch is home from Hustontown with his family, over Sunday.

When visiting a sick room, if in a perspiration, never remain any length of time, as the body in cooling may absorb the infection. If the complaint is of a contagious nature, do not enter the room with an empty stomach, and in attending a sick person never stand between the invalid and any fire there may be in the room, as the heat has a tendency to draw the infection laden air in that direction.

Why the Birds Migrate.

Speaking of birds coming back from the south, let me explain, so far as I can, where they have been why they went, and why they take the trouble to come all the way back again. Many thousands of years ago birds didn't migrate at all. There was no occasion for them to do so. All the northern countries, even Greenland, and the most northern parts of Europe, were warm the year round, and the birds and other animals which lived there found everything they needed close at hand. But by and by there came great changes in the conditions of the climate, and gradually there began a period known as the "Ice Period" when a large part of the northern part became extremely cold, and were buried under the ice. Of course, the birds which lived in these countries could not stand the severe change, so they had to either go to a warmer climate or die. The sensible ones all went south, and made the best of it. But they were quite forgetful their northern home, and long after, when the great icecap melted away, and when the northern countries became warm again, the descendants of the birds, which were driven out by the cold, went back to their own country. There they found plenty of food, so they stayed and made their nests and laid their eggs. But alas! the climate was no longer as it used to be—mild and warm the whole year round. It was divided into seasons, and the warm summer was followed by a cold winter. They had scarcely reared their young before they found that the air was beginning to get cold again, so as soon as the little ones were strong enough to stand the journey they all flew away to the south. But they never forget where their real homes are. Every spring there comes over them a great longing to go back and make their nests where they themselves were born. They cannot resist that longing. No matter where they may be—down in the Gulf states, in the West Indian islands, or perhaps thousands of miles away in the southern part of South America—back they come by tens of thousands, and by millions, to their old homes in the north.—Ernest Harold Baynes in the April Woman's Home Companion.

Two Great Cities.

Melbourne has always been the largest city of Australia. In its phenomenal growth it can be compared only with Chicago and San Francisco. In 1835 it had a name and fourteen inhabitants; in 1890 it contained 451,000 persons.—Gold made Melbourne. For ten consecutive years the gold mines from sixty to one hundred miles to the north and northwest, produced over $50,000,000 of gold every year. The many thousands of men required to mine this treasure bought their supplies in Melbourne and spent their money there. The city faced to the north where the mines were; its back door was on the sea. But the gold mines of Victoria have lost their old importance. They are still productive, but their yield is far inferior to that of the desert mines of Western Australia. Melbourne is slowly losing the largest resource that made her great and the wool and wheat trade is not likely to fully compensate her for the declining mining interests. The city was in 1891 to have 400,500 population, including the suburbs. Five years later only 451,000 persons were counted in the city and its environs.

The decline in population is probably only temporary, for Victoria is a very rich little state. Many miners have been drawn away by more flattering prospects elsewhere, but they will gradually be replaced by permanent settlers.

The great city, however, seems destined soon to lose its pre-eminence. Sydney is steadily increasing in population; by the last census it was only 42,000 under Melbourne's figures. Sydney is growing while Melbourne is scarcely holding her own. There are a number of reasons why Sydney will probably forge ahead and permanently maintain its lead among Australian cities.

One reason is because Sydney is on the east coast where the largest population and the greatest development of industries are found. Vessels in the foreign trade cannot visit all the lively little ports along this coast and so Sydney is a forwarding and receiving port for the trade of that entire coast. Melbourne's commerce on the other hand, is largely confined to the little state of Victoria. It is not a great tributary and in this respect Sydney has the advantage.

Then, again, Sydney faces the Pacific Ocean with its myriad islands, whose inhabitants, for 2,000 miles, carry on more or less trade with the capital of New South Wales; but Melbourne faces the Southern Indian Ocean, which is destitute of islands, and therefore the capital of Victoria has no island trade.

Another factor to the advantage of Sydney is that the immense coal fields of Australia are at her very doors and fuel is thus very easily and cheaply obtained to feed her growing industries. Coal must be carried a longer distance to Melbourne and thus her industries are placed at a slight disadvantage.

These are the most important reasons why Sydney has at last become the terminal point of all the steamship lines in the Australian foreign trade and why it is likely to take its place at the head of Australian cities.—New York Sun.

Chronic Bronchitis Cured.

"For ten years I had chronic bronchitis so bad that at times I could not speak above a whisper," writes Mr. Joseph Coffman, of Montmorenci, Ind. "I tried all remedies available, but with no success. Fortunately my employer suggested that I try Foley's Honey and Tar. Its effect was almost instantaneous, and I am now cured of the disease. On my recommendation many people have used Foley's Honey and Tar, and always with satisfaction." All dealers.

St. John Brodrick, the British secretary of war recently threw an interesting side light on military character. He said that when the cable companies with which he is associated offered reduced rates for telegraphic communication between wounded officers in Africa and their friends at home, many officers took advantage of the generous offer. But in the first 20 cables from officers nothing whatever was said of their condition, and the senders contented themselves with asking the odds on the Derby.—New York Advertiser.

A Doctor's Bad Plight.

"Two years ago, as a result of a severe cold, I lost my voice," writes Dr. M. L. Scarbrough, of Hebron, Ohio, "then began an obstinate cough. Every remedy known to me as a practicing physician for 35 years, failed, and I daily grew worse. Being urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, I found quick relief, and for the last ten days have felt better than for two years." Positively guaranteed for Throat and Lung troubles by W. S. Dickson, 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

A billion does not strike the average mind as a very great number in this day of billion dollar trusts, yet a German scientist has computed that at 10:40 a. m., April 29, a billion minutes will have elapsed since the birth of Christ.

The Great Disal Swamp.

Of Virginia is a breeding ground of Malaria germs. Spikeweed or marshy ground everywhere. These germs cause weakness, chills and fever, aches in the bones and muscles, and may induce dangerous maladies. But Electric Bitters never fail to destroy them and cure malaria troubles. "We tried many remedies for Malaria and Stomach and Liver troubles," writes John Charleston, of Byesville, O., "but never found any thing as good as Electric Bitters." Try them. Only 50c. W. S.
