EDITOR BARRON WRITES AGAIN.

His Recollections of Rev. White, Lawyer Cline, and Others.

(For the information of Mr. Barron's old time McConnellsburg friends, we will state that after the elder Mr. Barron had sold his farm near McConnellsburg, now owned by Hon. Peter Morton, the family moved to lown the News, with his reminiscences, came the cat down stairs, she arose, and under the skilful manipulation of tance from Mr. Runyan's resiback to Ohio and spent four years in a school at Hayesville. EDITOR NEWS :- In speaking of the old time lawyers, I omitted the name of Mr. Cline, I forget his initials. Mr. Cline was a minister of the Swedenborgian faith as well as a lawyer. I do not recollect where he came from to Mc-Connellsburg; but he was a southern man-a native of South Caroliua. He came there and bought the Spiece farm, as known then, about a mile northeast of townabove our place. He had several boys whom he wished to get on a farm and teach them to work. Mr. Cline, regularly every week day, walked into town to his office, going by our place. He was a regular type of the Southern gentleman-kept himself faultlessly dressed, his boots highly polished, and wore always a fine silk hat. We could always tell what time it was when he passed our house without looking at the clock. He always went to town at nine o'clock, and came home at five. He had no congregation there, but preached at home on Sundays to his family. I do not think he ever got much practice at the bar, though he was said to be a well read lawyer. He was a good speaker, and was in demand for Fourth of July orations. His oldest son, Hiram, as we called him, clerked in the drug store of Dr. Reamer, and afterwards went to a similar position at Ft. Smith, Ark. His oldest daughter was an accomplished and beautiful young lady. I have never heard what became of the family.

The ministers of the town at that time were Rev. N. G. White of the Presbyterian church, Rev. Martin Bechtel of the Lutheran, Rev. Mr. Waggoner of the German Reformed, and the Methodist ministers' names I have forgotten, as they were changed at that time every year, and they did not become impressed on my memory. Before the German Reformed began to occupy the old Seceder church, there was occasional preaching by Seceder min. her mother spent Saturday with Tuesday, en route to Gettysburg. ted to participate in the festivities isters of whom I remember one, a Mr. Gracy, who was a very able quite ill. preacher.
