large, filling the coffers of the operators, part of which in turn finds its way into the pockets of the many miners who toil

Down in the coal mines underneath the ground. Where a ray of sunshine never can be found.

The oil industry is another natural resource that is of great benefit to the vicinity. A trip through the oil districts that lie adjacent to the city impresses one with the vastness of the business and the thousands of wells seen in a small radius causes the observer to well understand how the Standard Oil Company exercises the power it does in so many ways. So well protected are its interests by a well regulated and systematized order of business that one who possesses oil on his premises can only operate his well when, how, and as this company sees fit to permit. It must be said, however, that the company is fairly liberal in their stipulated terms.

That Pittsburg is an iron town goes without contradiction. Some one in writing of it said that from the hilltops after nightfall it reminded one of "Hell with the lid off," a very forcible expression. It seems like a city on hills as in all directions that the eye chances to fall, can be seen the steep inclines hundreds of feet in height, dotted with houses, the lights from which in the evening a newcomer will mistake for stars. As one rides along in many localities and sees almost perpendicularly above him houses on ledges of rocks with winding stairways for their occupations to gain access, he well understands why he sees no babies playing around their doors and in their front yards.

I have rooming with me a friend who is also a disciple of "Ben Franklin," a printer of some experience with good habits and character but of a roaming disposition. He has walked across Fulton county twice for the reason, as he says, that there is but ten feet of railroad and stages travel after nightfall.

On one trip of some ten years ago he stopped in to see the Editor of the Democrat, now the Editor of The News, and played on the Editor's violin. On up the mountain he passed the night at the old McLivaine Hotel and there had the privilege of trying the valuable old violin that was in possession of an old lady as a family relic.

There are many other matters I might write about but as it is, you will either have to boil down this communication or get out a supplement, either of which I, of course, leave to you.

Yours respectfully,
CLARENCE B. SIFES.

A JOINT RESOLUTION
Proposing an amendment to section ten of article one of the Constitution, so that a discharge of a jury for failure to agree or other necessary cause shall not work an acquittal.

Section 1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, that the following is an amendment to the Constitution: that it be so, that section ten of article one, which reads as follows: "No person shall, for any indictable offense, be proceeded against criminally by information, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the militia, when in actual service in time of war or public danger, or by leave of the court for oppression or misdemeanor in office. No person shall, for the same offense, be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall private property be taken or applied to public use, without authority of law and without just compensation being first made or secured," be amended so as to read as follows:

No person shall, for any indictable offense, be proceeded against criminally by information, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the militia, when in actual service in time of war or public danger, or by leave of the court for oppression or misdemeanor in office. No person shall, for the same offense, be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; but a discharge of the jury for failure to agree, or other necessary cause, shall not work an acquittal. Nor shall private property be taken or applied to public use, without authority of law and without just compensation being first made or secured.
