FULTON COUNTY NEWS.

THE CONFESSION OF DAVID LEWIS THE NOTED HIGHWAYMAN AND COUNTERFEITER.

(Continued from last week.) No seminary can flourish where such a practice is persisted in; no system of discipline can reach the evil; and while the exertions of the master are defeated by the acts of the parent, the hopes of the parent are disappointed; and when he embraces his son on return from college, he finds him often, not only unimproved in his education, but ruined in his health and corrupted in his morals.

As soon as the college recess was over I left Princeton and went to Philadelphia with my pockets full of money and my head full of schemes. I did not remain long in so populous a place before I discovered many persons of the same stamp as myself; whilst my money remained, I did not think of any new enterprise, but my associates taking advantage of my generous disposition, practiced every art that ingenuity suggested, to trick me out of the greater part of it. I continued in Philadelphia two weeks rioting in every scene of dissipation, that my own vicious inclinations, and the free use of money could procure. Necessity at length compelled me to resort to my old plans, and the same system of midnight depredations robbing and pocket-picking was pursued here as in New York. I was very near embarking in a plan, which if it had succeeded would have enabled me to renounce my present course of life forever. It was to decoy the rich French banker, Mr. Girard out of the city into the country, and keep him in confinement until he gave checks on his own and other banks to a large amount. If this failed, we intended to enter the Dock street sewer and contrive to open a communication derun ground with the banking houses, and thus rob the vaults. But luckily for Mr. Girard, before the time ripened for action I received a letter from Melinda, advising me of the dangerous illness of my little daughter, and entreating me to return to New Brunswick without delay. I was therefore obliged to give up the enterprise for the time, and leaving my companions in great wrath at my leaving them at so critical a period; returned home with scarcely fifty dollars of good money at my command. After remaining with Melinda about four weeks, during which my purse became lighter every day, I determined upon going to the lines to procure some situation in the army under the command of Gen. Alexander Smyth.

Having prepared Malinda's mind for leaving her, I took my departure for the north in better spirits than I expected I should have done when my mind dwelt upon the forlorn condition in which I should leave a beloved wife and an engaging infant. Hope still buoyed me up with visionary schemes, and the expectation of plunder and booty which I promised myself when the army should make its entry into Canada tended much to drive away present melancholy reflections. On my way to the lines I met with companions as vicious and fond of pleasure as myself, and stopping at a wretched inn on the road, kept on purpose for the entertainment of gamblers and black legs, I spent several days and nights in uninterrupted scenes of carousal, gambling and drinking. My companions being old acquaintances, had formed a league and entered into a conspiracy to cheat me at cards of all my money. They succeeded in tricking me out of the remains of my ill-gotten cash, and on the morning of the fourth day I decamped at day-break, leaving them to pay the landlord my share of the bill. After traveling about fifty miles more with an empty purse and a hungry stomach, I applied to a wealthy farmer for employment, who agreed to hire me for a teamster. I did not remain long at the occupation before my employer's team was passed into the service of the United States army. I accordingly drove the wagon to the lines with a detachment of troops on the way to join the army under the command of General Alexander Smyth.

HE COULD HARDLY GET UP.

P.H. Duffy of Ashley, Ill., writes "This is to certify that I have taken two bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure and it has helped me more than any other medicine. I tried many advertised remedies, but none of them gave me any relief. My druggist recommended Foley's Kidney Cure and it has cured me. Before commencing its use I was in such a shape that I could hardly get up when once down." All dealers.
