SOME AGED SENATORS.

The United States Senate is composed largely of old men. A large majority of them are over sixty, quite a number are bordering on three score and ten, and fifteen are past seventy.

Senator Hawley of Connecticut is 77, and his colleague, Senator Platt, is 76. Senator Bate of Tennessee, is 77 years of age, and Senator Hoar of Massachusetts, was born the same year. Senator Stewart of Nevada, is 79, and his colleague, Senator Jones, is 73. Senators Collom and Allison of Illinois, are each 74 years of age. Senator Vest of Missouri, just retired, is 73. Senator Gibson of Montana, and Stewart of Nevada, are each 79.

Senator Proctor of Vermont, is 72, Senator Platt of New York is 70, and Senator Depew is a year younger.

The youngest Senator is Bailey of Texas, who is just past 40, and Beveridge of Indiana, is next, being 41.

Penrose of Pennsylvania, is 43.

NOTABLE NEW LAW.

A new law went into effect on January 1st relating to unseated lands and municipal liens or unpaid taxes. Under the new arrangement the tax collectors of the various boroughs and townships will now make their report of unseated lands and the amount of taxes thereon, to the prothonotary, who will enter it on new dockets.

The tax thereon becomes a lien on the land described in each return. At any time thereafter the commissioners may issue a seque facias and reduce the lien to a judgment, after which the property may be sold by the sheriff the same as on any other judgment.

Under the old law the unseated lands that is where the owner could not be found, were returned by the collectors to the office of the county commissioners.

The returns were in due time certified to the county treasurer, whose duty it was to keep the list and sell the properties at public auction every two years. The real owners had a chance to redeem the land so sold within two years, but if this was not done the sale stood.

Many people kept watch on such sales and obtained titles to valuable properties in this way. The new plan will do away with all this.

One feature is very plain. The costs will be made much greater than heretofore. A man who has a sale to gain a title to a piece of land will now have to pay value of the same, if he please be small and of little consequence.

THE ALPHABET OF SUCCESS.

The following alphabet is printed on a neat card and hung up in coffee taverns and places of resort and business in Great Britain.

Attend carefully to the details of your business. Be prompt in all things. Consider well, then decide positively. Dare to do right; fear to do wrong. Endure trials patiently. Fight life's battle bravely, manfully. Go not into the society of the vicious. Hold integrity sacred. Injure not another's reputation or business. Join hands only with the virtuous. Keep your mind from evil thoughts. Lie not for any consideration. Make few special acquaintances. Never try to appear what you are not. Observe good manners. Question not the veracity of a friend. Respect the counsel of your parents. Sacrifice money rather than principle. Use your leisure time for improvement. Venture not upon the threshold of wrong. Watch carefully over your passions. Extend to every one a kindly salutation. Yield not to discouragement. Zealously labor for the right. And success is certain.

SHE SOUGHT A BARGAIN.

The young man who had been trying to sell a boy's suit to the fussy woman customer wore a badgered air, says Chicago News. He had overturned and pulled apart pile after pile of clothing, and he foresaw an hour's work rearranging things after the customer had made up her mind.

"Here's one I think will do you," he said at last. "An all-wool serge, just the right size and finished in excellent style. There's a suit that will wear like iron. Look at the finish of it! Those things weren't put in for nothing. That suit's a bargain."

The woman held up the jacket and looked at it with a critical eye.

"Do you think it will fit?" she asked.

"Yes, ma'am."

"Seems to me it's too big."

"Just the right size," said the salesman.

"Do think the lining is durable?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"I want something that will stand wear, remember."

"It will wear like iron," said the salesman.

"I think you're asking too much for that suit."

"It's a bargain at that price."

"I want something that will look neat and stylish," said the woman, regarding the garment doubtfully.

"The style's good," said the salesman.

She looked at it closer, examining the texture minutely.

"Isn't there some cotton in it?" she asked.

Then the tension snapped.

"No'm," replied the salesman shortly.

"There was but we went to work and pulled it all out."

LABOR WORLD.

In Indiana the average work day is a little over nine hours.

London, Ont., firemen are asking for a ten per cent. increase in their salaries.

There are nearly 125,000 miners in Belgium, not ten per cent. of whom make $1 a day.

The standard rate of wages for bricklayers and plasterers' laborers in England is $7 a week.

Union printers at Waco, Texas, have presented a new wage scale calling for a substantial increase.

Steam fitters at New Haven, Conn., will demand $3.50 a day, an increase of fifty cents, after May 1.

In less than three weeks the Boot and Shoe Workers' stamp has been granted to factories in Massachusetts employing 10,000 hands.

CUT WORMS.

The Most Destructive of Early Insects for Tender Plants.

The most destructive insect of the early spring, especially to the young and tender plants, are the cut-worms, which live in the soil and come forth to feed only at night. They are not often seen because they are concealed during the daytime, but their work is too well known to every one who has tried to make an early garden or has planted corn on a grass sod. They do their destructive work by crawling out of their subterranean burrows at night and cutting off the young plant just at or beneath the surface of the soil and eating away the part they choose to use as food. Some species, known as Climbing Cut-worm, climb trees at night and feed on the young buds and the leaves of trees, especially fruit trees. They are of course quite destructive. The work of cut-worms is similar to that of earthworms, excepting that the latter generally draw the end of the plant into their burrows after having broken it off or pulled it out, while the former generally eat away a portion at the base end, leaving the remainder lying where it fell.

There are a great many kinds or species of cut-worms but they are so nearly alike that only an expert can generally recognize the differences, and they are uniformly obnoxious, working by similar methods and generally attacking similar plants in the same manner. They are the larvae, grubs or "worms" of common grayish to dark-colored and thick-winged moths or "millers" about an inch or more in extent, which fly around lights so abundantly a little later in the summer. They are cylindrical, about a quarter of an inch in diameter, and about an inch long when fully grown, and dark or about the color of the soil, marked with stripes.

They pass the winter as immature larvae in the soil and in the early spring they become active and are prepared to eat the first available growing vegetation.

They then feed and grow for a while, and next become pupae or chrysalids in cells in the ground. After a short quiescent pupal period they emerge as transformed or winged moths, and fly about in search of their mates and suitable places to deposit their eggs. They die after these are found and the eggs are laid.

As with most winged insects, especially of this general type, they do not take any food of importance in this adult state.—There may be two or more broods per year, owing to temperature and food supply. They are most destructive in the early spring because then they are most voracious and there is but little uncultivated vegetation available for them to feed upon, and the cultivated plants are smallest, and their depredations are therefore most conspicuous and serious.

As the eggs from which they hatch are laid in the previous fall and the larvae attain a partial growth before winter, we see why they are most abundant when they are most abundant in corn on sod ground. They have been feeding on the grass and clover, but when this is destroyed by plowing they are forced to attack the young corn plants.

REMEDIES.

There is no one remedy that is entirely effective, but if the following are combined we are sure relief will be obtained: 1.—Destruction of all weeds and grass and unnecessary vegetation especially in gardens. This will reduce their numbers in the summer and fall so they will not be so destructive the following spring.

2.—Hand picking, by finding where they have cut off plants and by digging slightly beneath the surface of the soil, find and crush the larvae. This is particularly effective just after a rain when their burrows or tunnels can be readily seen, looking like ridges made by minute moles.—We know a practical and extensive farmer who regularly practices this method every spring, thus going over all his corn fields and effectively destroying the insects. 3.—Plowing in the late fall so their cells in the ground will be broken and they will thus be destroyed. 4.—Board traps made by placing boards on the ground in the garden and picking the cut-worms from under them in the daytime while there concealed. 5.—A New England writer says he has trained his chickens to hunt for and exterminate the climbing cut-worms by first killing a few on the ground under the trees and as the fowls eat them they learn to scratch there for more. 6.—Poison bran is effective as a poison and is about the only means of applying a real insecticide. Stir one teaspoonful of Paris Green into a quart of water, add one pound of coarse brown sugar or one pint of molasses; with this moisten a gallon of bran (adding a little more water if necessary). Stir the poison mixture through it well. Put a spoonful before the growing plants or where the seeds will be planted, a few steps apart all over the garden or field, and cover it with soil to keep domesticated fowls from finding it. It will kill the cut-worm, but will also kill chickens if they find and eat it.

CONFESSIONS OF A PRIEST.

Rev. Jno. S. Cox, of Wake, Ark. writes, "For 12 years I suffered from Yellow Jaundice. I consulted a number of physicians and tried all sorts of medicines, but got no relief. Then I began the use of Electric Bitters and feel that I am now cured of a disease that had me in its grasp for twelve years." If you want a reliable medicine for liver and kidney trouble, stomach disorder or general debility, get Electric Bitters. It's guaranteed by W. S. Dickson. Only 50c.
