It Is Sometimes Confusing.
"What a beautiful luncheon!" said the guest.
"Yes," answered Mr. Cumrox, "mother and the girls say it is all right."
"But you aren't enjoying it."
"No, I'm a little embarrassed. I've been standing over here trying to figure out which are the cushions and which are the decorations."—Washington Star.

Why He Looked Happy.
"Sir, you look like an optimist. You have a happy countenance. Lend me a dollar."
"My friend, do you know why I look happy? It's because I haven't any wealth to bother me."

BABY'S FUTURE
Something for Mothers to Think About:
Lives of Suffering and Sorrow Averted
And Happiness and Prosperity Assured by
Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills
When All Else Fails.

Every child born into the world with an inherited or early developed tendency to distressing, disfiguring humors of the skin, scalp and blood, becomes an object of the most tender solicitude, not only because of its suffering, but because of the dreadful fear that the disfigurement is to be lifelong and mar its future happiness and prosperity. Hence, it becomes the duty of mothers of such afflicted children to acquaint themselves with the best, the purest and most effective treatment available, viz., The Cuticura Treatment.

High Authority.
A rebellious husband was objecting to doing certain work about the house and he quoted Scripture to his wife, showing that the household duties should properly be assigned to the woman. The good wife replied by reading to her astonished husband 2 Kings 21:13: "I will wipe out Jerusalem as a man wipes a dish, wiping it and turning it upside down." That husband has wiped the dishes ever since.

In Desperation.
Fan—"So she's engaged to Mr. Polk. I wonder how he came to propose?"
Nan—"I don't believe he did come to do it, but she was determined not to let him go until he did."

A Merciful Plan.
A St. Louis man is suing for divorce because his wife persisted in feeding him on eggs scrambled with onions. He is to be commended for applying such a mild remedy to the evil.

No Hair?

IDIOSYNCRASIES OF THE TIGER.

Most Difficult of All Animals to Conquer—No Such Thing as a "Tamed Tiger"—How He is Trained.....

Of all wild animals trained for menagerie and show purposes not one is as hard to conquer as the tiger. Compared to the training of lions and elephants the training of a tiger is as the breaking in of a vicious horse to the first lessons in etiquette of a clubby Newfoundland puppy. Even the most expert wild animal trainers balk at an assignment to "break" a tiger. Not more than one in ten professional lion trainers has the nerve to try his hand at the great, ferocious, striped cat.

As a matter of fact, there is no such thing as a "tamed tiger." Few and far between there are instances where the animals are shown as trained and broken in, but the friendship of the animal for the trainer who may have befriended it for years langes at the end of the man's blacksnake whip. From the day the acquaintance is made to the day man and beast are separated there is a steady warfare between them; the entire system of the panderous brute directed toward the one aim of killing the man and the violence of the master ever alert to frustrate that plan.

One of the peculiarities of taming a tiger is that the feat may be performed much better by a man totally strange to the animal than by the one who has helped rear it by the side of its mother. What the reason for this is few animal men can explain, unless it is that the subject is more apt to be inspired by a white-hot fear when it encounters a man first step taken in taming any wild animal is to familiarize it as much as possible with the fact that the newcomer into its life means no harm. Much depends upon the individual nature of the animal to be tamed in deciding upon a proper course for the primary lesson. If the brute is unusually treacherous he is given ample chance to work out his plans against the trainer, who is continually on guard and sees to it that each attack results in failure.

The early lessons administered to a tiger are rudimentary on the hide-and-seek plan. The trainer stands in front of the cage inviting the inmate to a stealthy attack. Unless the tiger be an exceptionally quiet subject there is not long to wait. Cautiously cowering in a corner, the tiger makes ready for the attack. Nearer and nearer he creeps and inches toward the stranger, standing seemingly transfixed near the bars of the cage. Other men may have fed the big fellow for years. His old trainer the brute would not think of attacking in this way. But the stranger is an intruder, to be struck from behind, from where most tigers' attacks come, and there lies the first lesson.

As the great war with the cruel claws shoots out between the bars the stranger steps to one side. Nothing happens. Not even a twitch is brought down on the dreadful paw. The stranger merely stands and looks. So does the tiger. The next move depends upon the desire of the brute to work harm. If the claws are withdrawn the stranger is simply prepared to undergo a second similar attack. If the paw remains defiantly thrust through the bars, up rises a slim, yellow wand in the hand of the man. Slowly and with full intent to show the brute what is happening the wand is raised higher and higher. Then a swish, and with all the strength of a powerful man's right arm, down comes a rawhide across the threatening paw.

If the animal shows fight there is an unfair duel between the paw and the rawhide, which can end but one way. Then the tiger is left alone to cool off and to ponder over what happened. Under no consideration is the animal further treated while it is angry. In time, even in the most stubborn cases, the tiger learns that if he leaves the man in peace nothing will happen. Also, that if he tries to attack the result is pain and defeat. Also, that the man will feed the tiger daily, not alone with meat and entrees, but with luxuries of the cat world—catnip, for example.

Once this reaction has been established between man and beast the second stage of the training is undertaken. It becomes necessary to prepare the brute for a closer interview with the stranger, who now prepares to enter the cage. Exactly as in the case of lion taming, a chair is the first thing introduced into the den. He of the catnip and the wand opens the cage, regards the surprised tiger, who wonders what is going to happen. He places a wooden chair in the cage of the brute and, leaving the cage as quickly as he had entered it, watches developments.

Unused to the strange intrusion, the tiger lies scowling in a corner and regards the chair. That the chair must lie in the cage is a thing few persons have ever seen. That there is such a fish one of the officers of the Academy of Natural Sciences declared yesterday. It is called the Lophius piscatorius, or fishing frog. It is five feet long, with a huge head, and, since it is too awkward to capture its prey with speed, nature has given to the creature a natural fishing rod. There are, rather, two rods—two long, whip-like tentacles, that extend five or six feet from the fish's nose, and terminate in a delicate filament, like a line, that has on its end a shaling morsel of membranous like a bait.

The fishing frog sits up the mud of the bottom enough to hide its head and body, while in the clear water its two rods, baited, lie. A little fish comes up to the shining bait to eat it, and instantly the frog leaps out from the dark, turbid cavern it has made in the water for itself, devours the fish, and then begins to angle again.—Philly delphia Record.

A Fishing Fish.

COMMERCIAL REVIEW.

General Trade Conditions.
Bradstreet's says: Wholesale trade is still seasonably dull and disastrous floods have checked trade and transportation in the Southwest. The situation as a whole, however, is still far from unfavorable. Higher prices for farm product of all kinds favor some compensation to producers from this source. The country's foreign trade promises all, failures are down to a low minimum and bank failures, though reduced by dullness in stock speculation, point to record totals outside of a few important speculative centers. Price readjustments, where lower quotations are necessary, as in iron and steel, go on without disorganization and feeling grows strong that such demands, discouraged by former high prices, may shortly develop.

Railway gross earnings thus far reported for the month of May show a gain of 11 per cent. over last year, while April net returns indicate a profitable operation. Relatively the best trade reports come from the Northwest and the country between the Ohio river and the lakes and the Mississippi and the Alleghenies.

DOCTOR ADVOCATED OPERATION--- PE-RU-NA MADE KNIFE UNNECESSARY.

CATARHIS is a very frequent cause of that class of diseases popularly known as female weakness. Catarrh of the pelvic organs produces such a variety of disagreeable and irritating symptoms that many people—in fact, the majority of people—have no idea that they are caused by catarrh. If all the women who are suffering with any form of female weakness would write to Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio, and give him a complete description of their symptoms and the peculiarities of their troubles, he will immediately reply with complete directions for treatment, free of charge.

Mrs. Eva Bartho, 133 East 12th street, N. Y. City, N. Y., writes: "I suffered for three years with leucorrhoea and ulceration of the womb. The doctor advocated an operation which I dreaded very much, and strongly objected to go under it. Now I am a changed woman. Peruna cured me; it took nine bottles, but I felt so much improved I kept taking it, as I dreaded an operation so much. I am to-day in perfect health and have not felt so well for fifteen years."—Mrs. Eva Bartho.

Miss Maud Steinbach, 1399 12th St., Milwaukee, Wis., writes: "Last winter I felt sick most of the time, was irregular and suffered from nervous exhaustion and severe bearing down pains. I had so frequently heard of Peruna and what wonderful cures it performed, so I sent for a bottle, and in four weeks my health and strength were entirely restored to me."—Miss Maud Steinbach.

Everywhere the women are using Peruna and praising it. Peruna is not a palliative simply; it cures by removing the cause of female disease. Dr. Hartman has probably cured more women of female ailments than any other living physician. His cures are effected simply by using and recommending Peruna.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis. Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.
