His Remarkable Wish.

Charles B. Aycock, Governor Paine's Celery Compound of North Carolina, illustrated a Electric Bitters point he wished to make in a political speech by telling a story of a young man he knew whose father died, leaving considerable property. There wereother sons and daughters of the man, and a contest over his estate followed. The dispute reached the courts and dragged along for several months. Finally a friend met the young man and spoke about the suit and the consequentill-feeling.

"Yes," assented the young man, we certainly are having a heap of trouble over father's property. Brother John wants more than his share; sister Lucy hasn't George is threatenin' to do some shootin'; and I don't know where the thing will end. Do you know, sometimes I almost wish he hadn't died ?"
