Moscow's Barbaric Splendor. No one, so far as we know, has presented to the mind of the distant reader a more vivid picture of the barbaric splendors of Moscow than Arthur Symons gives in this passage from his book about European cities: "Colors shrick and flame; the Muscovite eye sees only by emphasis and ty contrast; red is completed either by another red or by bright blue. There are no shades, no reticences, to modulations. The restaurants are filled with the din of vast mechanical organs, with drums and cymbals; o preat bell clashes against a chain on al, the trams, to clear the road; the music which one hears is a ferocity of brass. The masons who build the touses build in top-boots, red shirts and pink trousers; the houses are painted red or green or blue; the thurches are like the temples of savage idois, tortured into every unnatur al shape and colored every glaring

His Shaving Mug In a Tree.

The Webb City correspondent sends this "belated but interesting item" regarding a storm which took place near Neck City a few days ago: "J. N. Scott was not at home on the night of the storm last week, having gone to a neighbor's, some little distance away, and being prevailed upon to stay all night on account of the threatening weather. When he arrived at what should have been his home next morning he found that his new two-room house had disappeared, not a trace of it was visible anywhere in the vicinity.

His shaving mug and brush, which were in the house at the time of the storm, have been found in a tree two miles away. This leads Mr. Scott to believe that if he had been in the house at the time he would have had a long and perilous trip."-Kansas

On plazzas, in the cool of the evening, the new granny shawls are worn. They are made in every color and in almost any material, such as crepe, silk, or even old-world looking cashmere. The typical granny shawi is perfectly square. It must be folded so that the point comes down in the middle of the back, and it is thrown over the shoulders and fastened upon the centre of the corsage.

The Plain Woman.

The plain woman, with no special talent for pleasing the public, is often possessed of the highest type of beauty. We have all seen plain faces glow with the inward fire of spirituality up til they were, indeed, beautiful. Beauty is not merely "skin deep," but extends through to the core. It is immortal, and though the outward form and face may lose their graceful lines, the real beauty remains,-Madame,

For Pale Girls.

Paleness of the complexion is often one of the signs of anaemia, a complaint from which young girls very often suffer nowadays, says the Pittsburg Press. For these an indoor life is exceedingly undesirable, and they should be out in the fresh air as much as possible. A course of cod liver oil and iron is beneficial, and the diet should consist of milk, farinaceous foods etc. and a cold or tepld morning bath is excellent as causing better circulation to the body.

English Social Pavorite. Among the most admired of the young girls of the season that is past, says the Westminster Gazette, was Princess Patricia of Connaught. This graceful Princess of eighteen summers is the tallest of the members of the royal family, dances to perfection, notwithstanding her unusual height and boasts a delicacy of coloring and an expression of jole de vivre which charm all beholders. Princess "Patsy," as she is called, has been brought up with the greatest care, and, although devoted to hockey and other outdoor games, practices the quieter arts within doors with much assidu-

Benefit of a Hobby. How often does one hear the expression, "Oh, that is So and So's hobby," spoken rather disparagingly. It is the tendency of the average mind to regard a person who has a pronounced enthusiasm as a species of harmless lunatic, rather to be pitied. The truth of the matter is, however, that any one who has any especial fad is to be envied, as it probably provides more interest and amusement for its possessor than anything else. Any decided interest in life, whether it is dignified by the name of an occupation entioned slightingly as a fad, is eminently desirable. "I have never seen a genuine collector that is not happy when he is all energy to make the endeavor. lowed by circumstances to gratify his tastes." remarked a student of human should always be encouraged. It is a curious phase of our humanity that we will work diligently to make provision damaged by a man's manner. for our material needs when we are old and quite neglect to store up mental resources that will interest and amuse us until we are called hence."-New Haven Register. Spinsters of Bermuda.

In most countries where civilization is somewhat backward marriage is ap- cussed. parently regarded as a necessary fate of every woman. This is so much the case in Russia that there, when the parents of a girl see her getting on toward old-maidenhood without any prospect of marriage, they take her abroad for a time. After a year or two she will appear among her old friends as a widow, and though they may suspect that her late lamented husband never existed outside of imagination of those who invented him, yet the fiction is useful in giving her a certain status in society and enabling her to avoid the mortifications of the "unappropriated blessing," says Home Notes.

In Bermuda, on the other hand, girls are often prevented from marrying by the law of the land, which decrees that a woman who marries a foreigner shall not only lose what property she may happen to have, but shall also become incapable of inheriting any. Sometimes Bermudan girls renounce their birthrights for love's sake; but as a rule the charms of penniless damsels are not sufficient for men to de sire them for wives, and, therefore, many of them are doomed to spinsterhood by the law.

Charm of the Dismantled House. Just before going away for the summer the housekeeper with an eye for the beauty of simplicity, will have a happy hour looking through the shadowy, dismantled house. It is then probably nearer to what the true home should be than at any other time. It is spotlessly clean, moths and microbes and dust having been ruthlessly rout-ed. The bric-a-brac is disposed of on hospitable shelves out of sight. Only cool-looking, dark shades or blinds temper the light, and the pleasant outlines of the windows are in full view. The furniture does not intrude as usual, and the undraped doors and almost empty tables and mantels rest the eye wonderfully. The beauty of the rugs is newly discovered in the absence of the many distracting trifles of fully furnished days.

No one needs apologise that her rooms are partly dismantled previous to a further means of identification casts light to Europe or the country. Too should be taken of prisoners' mouths.

often the untimely caller is renewing her faith in a woman she thought hopeless, by the sense of rest and peace a room bare of its usual "dressed up" features gives her. It is a distinct disappointment to hear that not for restfulness and beauty of line and color and light and shade, was the refreshing change made.

Jackets For Fall.

It is going to be a fall when the separate jacket will be fashionable and when the woman who does not want to wear a suit all alike can vary her appearance with a coat that contrasts with her costume.

The contrasting coat for fall can be fitted in the back, rather straight in the front, faced with a self color and buttened with visible buttons or fastened with braids and cords.

The collar will be most elaborate The coat will be low in the neck, something on the Dutch order, and there will be a trimming of lace and other pretty decorations.

As for the sleeves of the fall coats, words quite fail. They will be so elaborate that, after a woman has exhausted all her powers of imagination she can go to work and imagine a sleeve still more fancy than her mind can paint.

But those who want a sieeve that slips on easily and which is pretty to look at, becoming to the figure and which is sure to hold its style in all the fall, there is a balloon sleeve called the Little Jack Horner sleeve. It is low upon the shoulder and tight in the upper arm. It gradually grows larger until at the wrist it is the circumference of a fairly well developed pillow case. Here it is finished with two very full and very deep ruffles of lace. This is an admirable sleeve for any fall coat, and it has the merit of dressing up the coat remarkably .-New Haven Register.

Saudoir Chat.

Woman's idea of paradise is a place where the cook never has a day out. An Arab lady doctor has been appointed house surgeon at the newly established hospital at Constantine, Algeria.

It isn't a good thing to be too terribly busy. That is Mrs. Grundy's specialty.

Being pretty does not necessarily hinder a woman from being intellectual. If she's elever enough to be beautiful she is smart enough to be brainy.

When woman loses her beauty she begins to take care of it. Queen Alexandra, ever anxious to do what she can for the good of Irish workers, has given orders that all her linen and tweed gowns for Cowes week should be of Irish manufacture. There is one thing that a woman or is simply an enthusiasm, or even fears more than a mouse, and that is her husband's silence.

"1830" facings are very fashionable. Comfort, freedom and simplicity are the watchwords. The lingerie hat with a huge ribbon bow is universal. Ribbon bows and sashes add a pretty touch to most thin gowns. Shirred "nun's tucks" make an effective and stylish garniture. Cuffs for little girls' dresses are broader in the newest modes.

Guimpes still play an important part in the small girl's wardrobe. Fine tucks in body depth are a feature of the gowns of little girls.

Among "tub" frocks pure white is the most satisfactory for children. Full, fluf'y modes are more becoming to the tall, slender girl of awkward age. A scalloped lower outline marks many stylish collars and deep berthas on giris' bodices. Sleeves that extend to the neck in epaulet style give an unusual touch that makes for variety. All colors of shoes and stockings are worn, especially tan, white, pink and blue, the latter by the small fry. A pleated or tucked skirt, with a smart little L'ton jacket, is a good choice for a linen ctility suit for girls. The little man still wears the Russian suit, while the boy a little older wears a jacket suit with fulled knickers and an Eton collar.

Linen, duck, pique, mercerized fabries, lawn, dimity, organdy, muli, Swiss handkerchief linen and Paris muslin in white and colors, in endless variety, constitute the list of stuffs fashionable for juvenile clothes and suggest many

COMMERCIAL REVIEW.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s "Weekly Review of Trade" says:

The past week has brought more encouraging results in the business world, and from many points come reports of steadily expanding trade, while it is not exceptional to find comparisons with the corresponding week last year favorable to 1904. Retail trade in Fall lines of dry goods, clothing, millinery and nearly all wearing apparel shows a healthy growth, and for hardware, household utensils and kindred lines there is a broader de-

The best development of the week was the resumption of work in many industries that have suffered through strikes, while several serious controversies were averted. Crop progress is better that average, and high prices promise large profits to the farmers Railway freight is heavy, chiefly due to the marketing of grain and cotton and earnings in August were 2.8 per cunt larger than in 1903.

Conservatism is still the prominent characteristic of the primary market for cotton goods. Revival of irregularity in the raw material again caused reluctance among both buyers and sellers to anticipate future needs. Foreign demand still removes considera-ble surplus and would be larger if quick deliveries could be made of grades for which there is inquiry. Failures this week numbered 200 in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—Life looks dark indeed when a woman feels that her strength is fading away and she has no hopes of ever being restored. Such was my feeling a few months ago when I was advised that my poor health was caused by prolapsus or falling of the womb. The words sounded like a knell to me, I felt that my such had seen but I wall F. Pinkham's Vacantal to me, I felt that my such had set : but Lydia E. I am so thankful for the help I obtained through its use."—Mrs. Florence Danforth, 1007 Miles Ave., St. Joseph, Mich.
